Durum Wheats Are Spring Varieties

Differ in Adaptation and Yielding Ability and Resistance to Drought.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are twelve varieties of durum wheat commercially grown in the United States. They differ in their adaptation and yielding ability, resistance to drought and rust, and in the quality of their grain, as well as in their appearance. They are all described by J. Allen Clark and John H. Martin of the United States Department of Agriculture in Farmer's Bulletin 1304, "The Durum Wheat," just published.

The durum wheats are all spring varieties with thick, compact heads, long stiff beards and large hard kernels. They are grown principally in the northern Great Plains area, where they are best adapted because of their resistance to drought and rust, which enables them to outyield other spring wheats. During the past ten years the center of the durum acreage has moved northward and westward.

Used for Granular Flour. Most of the durum varieties have white (amber) kernels, and the grain is used chiefly for the manufacture of a granular flour called semolina, from which macaroni, spaghetti and other alimentary pastes are made. There usually has been an active foreign demand for this wheat, but the flour mills in this country were not equipped for satisfactorily grinding these wheats and there was little demand for the product on the domestic market. More recently, however, large mills have been constructed for grinding durum wheat exclusively. A considerable trade in semolina and durum flour has developed, and finally a large macaroni industry has been established. The industry now uses annually more than 20,000,000 bushels of durum, or nearly half the average annual production in recent years.

Kubanka is High Yielding. Kubanka is the variety best adapted for all the varying conditions in the sections producing durum wheat. It is a high-yielding wheat, considerably resistant to rust, of good milling quality, and best adapted for making both macaroni and bread.

Acme and Monad are two similar durum varieties which are very resistant to stem rust. Acme is the highest yielding durum variety in most of South Dakota, and Monad the best yielding variety in North Dakota. Both produce macaroni of a grayish color, considered by manufacturers less salable than that made from Kubanka wheat. Mindum is the most productive variety in Minnesota.

The distinguishing characteristic and the adaptation of the twelve different varieties are discussed in the bulletin, which may be had free of charge from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Difficulties in Getting Good Start of Alfalfa

There are a few difficulties in the way of getting a good start of alfalfa in the spring, and when these are guarded against it is easier than to get red clover started. It is of but little use to seed alfalfa on land which is sour in both surface and subsoil, and even then it is risky until limestone has been applied. Alfalfa can secure the same food from humus as from limestone, but it can get it from the humus only as the humus decays, and during the dry part of the summer the humus may cease to decay sufficiently to supply enough food, and the alfalfa perishes. If plenty of limestone is present the alfalfa may secure the same kind of food even when the humus does not decompose.

New and Effective Way to Protect Cucumbers

A new and effective method of controlling the striped cucumber beetle is recommended by the entomology section of the Iowa experiment station. This method consists of dusting the young cucumber plants with a material made of one part of calcium arsenate and twenty parts of gypsum. Plants should be kept thoroughly protected by frequent applications of this dust. This method has been found more effective than the old method of spraying the vines with lead arsenate. The calcium arsenate acts as a poison and the gypsum stimulates plant growth.

Dwarf Essex Rape Best All-Round Forage Crop

Dwarf Essex rape is one of the best all-round crops to grow for hog forage to take the place of or supplement the more permanent crops like clover and alfalfa. It is good for calves, cattle and horses but particularly adapted to hogs and sheep. It is a good emergency crop which can be sown as early as the ground can be worked or may be put in any time up to the last of July.

Thrash Soy Beans With Common Grain Separator

Soy beans may best be thrashed with the grain separator, according to the farm crops authorities of the Iowa experiment station. The grain separator does just as satisfactory work as a regular bean huller when a few changes have been made to reduce the speed of the cylinder.
