STATE FARM PROGRAM FOR OREGON OUTLINED

Study the Markets; Increase Your Dairy Herds, Is Advice of O. A. C. Extension Head

A state-wide agricultural program was outlined by Paul V. Maris, director of extension work at the Oregon Agricultural college, at the meeting of the state farmers union held in Eugene last week. Mr. Maris pointed out that a period of depression has always followed times of low purchasing power of farmers. He urged that farmers study the market situation and grow crops that could be most efficiently marketed. He gave the dairy industry as the most promising in Oregon and also showed that there was need for intensifying farming, improving methods and increasing land area by improvement.

Wheat, beef, wool, dairy and poultry products were given as products with unlimited established markets. Gradual increase was recommended for small fruits, nuts and vegetables. Pork should be produced for state consumption only, because of the high freight rate in effect.

A program for the entire nation, as well as the several states, was a vital need at present, was the belief of Mr. Maris. An understanding of the marketing conditions, of co-operative action must come, and this would save the American farmer from relinquishing his farm to one of a lower class and with lower standards of living. "The Anglo-Saxon must stay on the farm," he said, "for they are the most intelligent class of people in America and we need intelligence behind our agricultural projects."

The program for the state was divided into six major sections, as follows:

Group I. Staple products for which there is a relatively unlimited established market: 1, wheat; 2, beef; 3, wool and mutton; 4, butter, cheese condensed milk; 5, poultry and eggs.

Group II. Products to be increased gradually as potential markets are developed: 1, small fruits; 2, prunes; 3, apples; 4, sweet cherries; 5, pears; 6, peaches and apricots; 7, walnuts and filberts; 8, grapes; 9, potatoes; 10, broccoli; 11, vegetables.

Group III. Products which because of freight differential should be produced for state consumption only: 1, pork.

Group IV. Bulky products with relatively low value per pound, which cannot be shipped or moved great distances: 1, hay; 2, all green forage and silage crops.

Group V. Products which should be grown for home community consumption only, except on scale large enough for commercial marketing: 1, all specialties for which there is not a relatively unlimited established market.

Group VI. Special products for which there is an established market that will be materially affected by Oregon's probable output: 1, legume seed (alfalfa, red and alsike clover); 2, rye, orchard and tall oat grass seed; 3, barley; 4, breeding stock.
