One of the stories, that the late James Payne liked to tell was about what he called an American duel, wherein two duelists with one second, met within doors and drew lots to decide which should shoot himself. A was the unlucky man, and without a word he retired into the next apartment to carry out the purpose of self-destruction. B and the second, both very much moved by the tragedy of the situation, remained in listening attitudes. At last the pistol was heard, and they were shuddering with emotion and remorse, when suddenly in rushed the supposedly dead man, triumphantly exclaiming, "Missed, by heaven!"

OUR LARGEST CAVE

In 1881 a man passing over a hole in the ground had his hat shot off by a sudden gust of air. History fails to record how far he ran or how fast. When he stopped and recovered his senses he told others of this unexpected and exciting experience. A party accompanied him back to the spot and Wind Cave, one of the wonders of our West, a few miles north of the town of Hot Springs in the southwestern corner of South Dakota, was discovered.

Although not all of this cave has been as yet explored, that portion which has been trod by man comprises a larger area than that occupied by any other known cave in America. The explored portion comprises about one hundred miles of passageways and several hundred rooms or chambers. No outlet has been discovered; therefore, the end is as much a mystery as ever.

Aside from an occasional trickle down some wall, there is an unusual absence of water in this cave. The temperature is a pleasant medium as caves go, neither too warm nor too cold. A peculiar feature which scientists seem unable to solve to their satisfaction is that of the shifting of the movements of air through this cave. At times the trend of the air at the entrance is outward and then again it is inward.

While it is anticipated that ultimately many different routes through this underground cavern will be available to visitors, three only have been opened up to this time. The longest of these routes includes some seventy-five rooms and about six hours are required to make the circuit.

The names bequeathed to the various chambers or rooms are characteristic of the predominating feature of each. There's the Post Office, where most visitors endeavor to find space for their cards; the Bride's Chamber, the Garden of Eden, Dante's Inferno, the Opera House, the Cross Roads, the Fair Grounds and so on. These rooms differ widely both as to size and formation. The Fair Grounds is reputed to be the world's largest underground cavern, being upwards of an acre in extent.

These rooms are arranged in parallel tiers and are also stacked in layers. This latter arrangement on so vast a scale as here is evidence is decidedly unusual in cave architecture. The long and short of it is that this cave takes on a resemblance to an eight-story underground office building.

This cave was created a national park in 1903 and is open to tourists throughout the year.

THE NIAGARA OF OUR NORTH-WEST

In the mountains of the Cascade range, southeast of the city of Seattle, in the state of Washington, three rollicking streams, born of melted snow, tumbling from the heights above, run together and form one larger stream. This broader, deeper stream, the Snekumie river, meanders along through peaceful valleys, fringed by heavily-timbered lands, presses onward between great hills which threaten to stop its course and then, all of a sudden, in the midst of surroundings of great beauty, flows over a sharp ledge and pours down gracefully into a deeply-carved gorge 270 feet below.

For centuries this nature-made spectacle, unknown, played its part in the general scheme of the universe. Even to this day it is practically unheard of nationally and is sought out by but a very few of the thousands of well-intentioned folks who, intent upon broadening their horizon of information and getting acquainted with their own country, journey across the continent to see what the other side is like. But the remarkable phenomenon of a river, hidden away amid the forests and mountains, deliberately dropping a straight 270 feet, and then continuing on its way to the sea, was destined to and did, eventually, come into its own as the development of our water-power resources began to claim attention.

The enormous potential power represented in this great waterfall deserved and received recognition. Engineers set to work to compel this falling water to end its wasteful and meaningless career and turn its energy to useful pursuits. And so it came to pass that an electrical generating plant was constructed a few hundred feet above the falls. Later a second power-producing plant was installed at the river's edge just below the falls. Now the force of the water which forms this great cataract is made to turn the machinery that develops hundreds of thousands of horse power of electrical energy. Much of this energy is transmitted long distances through the medium of heavily insulated high-tension cables and lights and otherwise serves the fast-growing cities of the Puget Sound region. Thus, without marring its beauty, man has made this majestic God-made waterfall serve his majesty, the American Citizen.
