

OBSTINATE CASE RELIEVED QUICKLY

Says Korex Did More Than Everything Else Tried in Five Years.

"For five years I suffered from gland troubles," says Mr. J. Johnson, of Dundee, Mississippi, "and could not get much relief, although I underwent three X-ray examinations. Then I tried korex compound and it did me more good than all the treatments I had tried in the five years. I cannot say too much in praise of it. Although I am now 50 years old, I feel I am only 25."

Many remarkable restorations to vigorous health and normal activity are being credited to korex compound almost daily by enthusiastic users. Sufferers from weakness, appetite, aching muscles, glandular inactivity, and premature old age, will be interested in learning that the American distributors of korex compound have arranged for korex compound to be sold in Cottage Grove at Kem's for Drugs. Just ask for korex compound.

COOPERATIVE MOHAIR SELLING GETS BETTER PRICE

Preparations are being made by the Pacific Cooperative Wool Growers to handle the largest accumulation of mohair in their history. Many new mohair growers are joining the association from California and Oregon as a result of the satisfactory prices received by members. Last year the association sold a carload of mohair for 95c the pound, which is the highest price received in Oregon for many years. Over 300 members shared in the high priced carload. Estimates by growers and dealers place the average price paid outside of the association for the 1923 clip of Oregon mohair at a trifle less than 50 cents the pound. The entire association pool for 1923 brought a gross price of 56 1/2 cents and netted growers 52 1/2 cents. Over 50 per cent of the pool brought 60c the pound gross and 12 per cent of the pool brought 95 cents. The total cost of 4 cents a pound for sorting, insuring, warehousing, selling and shipping mohair is considered very low and is less than the customary cost for its service.

Until the association commenced selling mohair on grade and at its actual value, most mohair growers didn't know that there was a vast difference in value between fine and coarse hair. For years they had been selling their mohair at a flat price, although frequently the fine hair was worth very nearly double what adult hair was worth. Pacific Cooperative Wool Growers is the first organization to commercially classify mohair into mill grades while the hair is still the property of the growers.

The educational value of the association's work has been worth a great deal to the mohair industry of western Oregon. Growers are learning the relative value of the various commercial sorts and are thus able to improve their breeding so as to produce the most desirable type of mohair. The association is composed of 2700 wool growers, some 400 of whom also produce mohair. It is strictly cooperative and is conducted entirely by the growers. The directors of the mohair districts elected by the members are Fred W. Herrin, Ashland; C. L. Beckley, Dixon; Scott Henry, Oakland; E. A. McCronek, Eugene; J. B. Cornett, Shedd, and J. W. Smith, Aurora.

FARM POINTERS.

(From O. A. C. Experiment Station) Better cabbage, tomatoes and other transplanted vegetables can generally be grown from strong plants which are bought than from plants raised at home where there is neither hot house nor hot bed.

Home grown seedlings are often raised in boxes kept near a window and due to poor growing conditions, which are apt to be found there, the plants become tall, spindling and weak and will not develop well when set in the garden. Often such plants while in the boxes are attacked by the damping-off fungus which will spread rapidly through the box. This disease rots off the stems of the plants at the surface of the ground, thus making them worthless.

For early potatoes, while the ground is still cold, the planting of whole seed is the best practice. Such seed does not rot if the germination is slow.

Berry bushes are much less damaged if all pruning and trellising is completed before the young buds are large enough to be broken off in the work. It will soon be too late to prevent such breaking, so all incompleting trellising should be rushed.

Sweet corn may be had throughout the season by planting varieties which mature at different times. Good gardeners in many sections are using Portland Market and Golden Bantam, and very often a variety for fall called Howling Mob. Much better yields are to be had by having the sweet corn plot as nearly square as possible. This provides for better pollination and better yields.

Lettuce acreage in Oregon will probably be smaller this year than last. At least there will be no outstanding increase as has been the case the past few years. Many sections are reporting smaller plantings than last year because prices did not come up to expectations.

HEBRON.

(Special to The Sentinel.) April 8.—Mrs. G. M. Keibelbeck went to Lookingglass last Thursday to attend the funeral of an uncle.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Huff were in Eugene last Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ream, of Walterville, spent the week end at the home of their daughter, Mrs. G. M. Keibelbeck.

Dennis Rickard, of Eugene, attended church here Sunday.

A number of the young people of the neighborhood enjoyed a hike up Whitney butte Sunday afternoon.

Lester Gierster has gone to Dunsmuir, Calif., where he will be employed.

A number from this neighborhood attended church at Latham Sunday evening.

H. G. Armstrong, British consul-general at New York, said at a dinner: "Diplomacy is well defined in the oriental story of the rajah who dreamed one night that all his teeth fell out. The rajah, troubled with this dream, sent for a soothsayer and asked him to interpret it. 'Sire,' said the soothsayer, 'your dream means that all your family, even down to your youngest child, will die before your eyes.' The rajah was so infuriated by this interpretation that he had the soothsayer hanged. Then he sent for another soothsayer, told him his dream again, and again asked for an interpretation. The second soothsayer, a true diplomat, assumed a beaming, joyous look, and cried, 'Sire, this most auspicious dream means that your life will be prolonged beyond the lives of all your family. Yes, even the youngest and strongest will not outlast you.' And the second soothsayer was sent away with purses of gold."

A brilliant young gentleman employed in an English government office had developed the art of arriving there late. He had been warned repeatedly by the head of the department. Every week this crusty official examined the book in which the clerks registered the time of their arrival, but our friend showed no improvement. One day the late arrival realized that it was up against a crisis. What could he do with the timebook? There was not much time to waste. Taking the attendance book he sealed it up carefully, labeled it "Not to be opened except in the event of war with Russia," and dispatched it with other documents to the governor of Hongkong. It lay for years carefully guarded in Hongkong, but finally it was opened and a polite message came from the authorities saying that as the instructions in the book were evidently in code would the authorities please send the key.

A pathetic story which comes from Germany tells about a man who, before his death, arranged for dividing his estate of 200,000 marks between his two sons. One of them deposited his 50,000 marks in the savings bank, where it still remains. The other expended his heritage in the purchase of wines; he has just finished drinking these, and has sold the empty bottles for 9,000,000,000,000,000,000 marks.

Her Tyrannical Superior.

They had a woman traffic officer in an eastern city and she was a good one, too. She wore white gloves, knickerbockers, a jaunty cap and directed traffic with all the nonchalance of an expert. The other day, however, she turned in her equipment and returned to skirts. A friend wanted to know what the trouble was.

"I don't care to discuss it," the aggrieved one declared.

"Aw, go ahead and tell me, dearie," said the other.

"Well, the chief refused a reasonable request and I quit."

"Something in the line of duty?" the other woman wanted to know.

"I so consider it. I merely wanted an hour off to get my hair washed."

Apparently Japanese women are just as keen on pretty things to wear as are American women. At all events, so it seems, judging from a story that we read in Sessue Hayakawa, the film actor. When in Paris recently with his wife, Tauri Aoki, the lady treated herself to a new hat—price 300 francs. Her husband pretended to be shocked at her extravagance. "Three hundred francs for a hat! Why, it's a sin!" "Never mind," replied Mrs. Hayakawa, "the sin will be on my own head."

Dickens used to tell a story of his biographer, John Forster. Forster had a devoted and skillful servant, Henry, who was always most correct in everything he did. It was therefore surprising one night, when Forster was entertaining several writers at dinner, to see the scrupulous Henry make error after error. He upset a plate of soup, and Forster uttered a cry of alarm. He forgot to serve the sauce for the fish, and his manner said, "Why, Henry!" Altogether he made the excellent dinner seem a poor and slovenly repast. When, at the end, he had set the port and walnuts on the table, Henry leaned over Forster's chair and said in a tremulous voice, "Please, sir, can you spare me now? My house has been on fire for the last two hours."

"Florida is much warmer than the Riviera. It is much wetter, too," says George Cohan. "I was dining in a fishing club in Florida one evening. On the wall behind me was an enormous stuffed tarpon in a glass case. A Pittsburg millionaire lurched into the dining room, stared at the tarpon for a minute and then said, 'The man who caught that—hie—fish is a—hie—liar.'"

Canon William Sheafe Chase of Brooklyn, while in Albany fighting for the screen censorship said to a reporter: "Anybody who could contemplate an uncensored screen optimistically would be as bad as Mrs. Jones. 'My second husband, Bill, ain't no saint,' said Mrs. Jones, 'but I'll say this for him. He's better than my first was by a long shot. He's in jail so much, you see, that practically all I earn I have for my own use.'"

Not far off the boulevard between Los Angeles and San Diego are some quaint towns and one of them has a unique garage. At one time it was a church but now a double door has been cut through the side and the vestibule at the front is used for an office. But the blend of the old and new affords a laugh to every traveler who stops there, for over the door, weatherbeaten but still readable, is a scriptural quotation, "Behold, I have set before you an open door." And on the panel below, the garage man has inscribed in red paint, "Positively no admittance."

13th ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION SALE

Just thirteen years ago, and it so happens on the thirteenth of April, this store was opened for business. To us the figure "13" has had no significance except that, due to more or less common emphasis placed upon the figure "13," we have used this figure to call your attention to this anniversary event. However, when we look back over the past thirteen years we realize that the progress and success of this store during this period is significant and much is due to the generous patronage accorded us by our customers. Now we are going to celebrate by starting the fourteenth year with a real old fashioned bargain giving event, just at a time when bargains are most appreciated, beginning next Saturday. Come and celebrate with us and partake of the many good values.

EGG LAYING CONTEST IS CONSIDERED IN OREGON

Oregon needs an egg laying contest. The poultry department of the state college not only favors such a contest but it would welcome an opportunity to assist in organizing and maintaining it, provided it could be financed in such a manner as to make it a credit to the state, says A. G. Lamm, poultry husbandman in charge of experiment station work at the college.

Many poultrymen and farmers are unable to trap their stock and have no way of telling the real merits of their selection of breeding work without an official test, explained Mr. Lamm.

"It is also a fact that few poultry keepers keep actual records of cost of production, a matter in which the public at large is interested. If, as at the present time, eggs are low in price and it is costing as much to feed a hen as she is returning in eggs produced, the public should know it and, knowing it, perhaps they would not be averse to paying at least enough to compensate the producer of good quality eggs," he said.

Resolutions favoring an egg laying contest were adopted by the Oregon bankers' association, the Willamette valley realtors' association and the Oregon poultrymen's association at the recent agricultural conference at Oregon Agricultural college.

Maude: What a beautiful new gown Helen is wearing. Says it's imported, doesn't she?

Marie: Not exactly in those words. It's her last season's dress. The dressmaker has turned it inside out and now she says it's "from the other side."
