Lane Berries Are Early. J. A. Ruth & Sons, of Rainier, dispute the statement that the first Oregon strawberries were marketed in Portland on May 5. Mr. Ruth says they picked ripe and luscious strawberries for the table as early as April 27 and that on May 2 they made their first commercial shipment to Marshfield. Since then, he says, they have been making daily shipments.

"The district that produces these early berries," says Mr. Ruth, "is limited in area, extending about a mile up and down the Siuslaw river from Rainier. In this favored little district the strawberries ripen from 8 to 15 days ahead of berries grown three miles either way from Rainier."

"The variety from which our earliest berries come is an early-maturing strain of the New Oregon, and is the earliest by seven days of any berry we can get."
