LET THERE BE PEACE.

The smoke of political battle has cleared away. The people have spoken. Whether or not they acted wisely, or came to their decision from false premises, should no longer be a subject of serious discussion if popular government is to be successful.

The Sentinel wishes to say nothing concerning the recall to stir the feelings of those who were on the losing side. It feels, however, that two statements should be made:

First—The timber cruise is to go ahead practically the same as if nothing had happened. Unquestionably the present Nease contract will be carried through. The new commissioners are sincerely for a timber cruise and will see that it is honestly and fairly carried forward until the timber of the entire county has been cruised.

Second—No one made any large contributions to any fund for or against the recall, as the statements soon to be filed will show. The recall committee spent not to exceed a few hundred dollars and was at all times short of funds for legitimate expenses. The bill for printing the recall petitions has not yet been paid. Funds were not on hand at the close of the campaign to liquidate obligations amounting to probably $200 or $300. The campaigns for and against the recall were as near free will campaigns as are likely ever to be seen in Lane county. The cost to the newspapers, who gave freely of their space for contributions, was high. They have never before given so much in any campaign.

The new officials can only successfully carry forward their work through the cooperation of the electorate as a whole, or, at least, without any attempt being made to frustrate their efforts, or to direct their efforts, upon the part of those who favored or opposed them.

The Sentinel has spoken in almost exactly the same words when it has been defeated, and it feels that the same words are equally appropriate now.

The Sentinel has no unkind words to say of anyone—not even of the few who might have had unkind words to say of it had the result been otherwise. If we are to have good losers, we must also have winners who do not rub it in.

Let there be peace.

The handsome endorsement given President Coolidge, Senator McNary and Representative Hawley is a refreshing indication that the people often reward those who serve them to the best of their ability. Recent events have shown that the president is not truckling in order to be the favorite at the polls and the vote was for a man who has been tried and has been found ready to face the music even when unpopularity may be the result. Senator McNary once had several factions opposing him but at the polls sore spots must have been forgotten. Representative Hawley is accustomed to a hearty endorsement of his efforts and probably is the senior western member in point of years of service.

THE BOYS DESERVE IT.

The Sentinel gets some satisfaction out of both the veto by the president of the adjusted compensation bill and the overriding of the veto by congress.

The Sentinel believes that President Coolidge was sincere in his veto. He would hardly have used his veto at a time when he should have been courting popularity with the veterans unless he sincerely believed that his reasons for doing so were sound. By his veto he showed that he stands ready to do right, let the consequences be what they may.

We take satisfaction in the overriding of the veto because we want to see the veterans get their adjusted compensation provided they want it—regardless of whether they need it.

We would have willingly carried on the war for years—at a cost far exceeding anything that the adjusted compensation can cost.

Every veteran, whether he got across or not, if he served any length of time, sustained a material setback equal to anything he can get from the adjusted compensation.

While the veterans were performing their duty, whether at home or fighting on a foreign strand, those at home were enjoying war prosperity and many were not satisfied with the legitimate profits of prosperity. Many who sat at swivel desks and bungled jobs as they never were bungled before—when bungling meant death and suffering to those serving in the khaki—were paid wages out of all proportion to their services and were then presented with distinguished service medals.

Those of us who remained at home and prospered—while the boys in khaki were making safe our firesides and securing our prosperity for the future—should be glad to see the veterans rewarded. The Sentinel will not complain about its part, whatever it may be.

If a man showed as much celerity about getting home from work as he does asperity about getting to work, his wife would be happy to pardon the latter.

The New York police have arrested a cosmopolitan. We presume he was charged with committing grand larceny on the alphabet.

The fish walk is one of the very latest dances. Those who would be in the swim must learn it.

Has the dairy been inspected that furnishes the lactal fluid for the milky way?

After all, the most lasting happiness comes from making others happy.

When a man says he isn't bossed by his wife, other men wonder whether he is a liar or just plain, ordinary thick in the head.

It wouldn't be so bad if a loafer was satisfied with taking up his own time.

Some people don't hear Opportunity when she knocks because they are making too much noise cursing their luck.

There may be some satisfaction in rising above those around you, but the truly great take more pleasure in raising others with them.

Men are equal only after death, and if they could be nothing but equals during life, this old world would be a dead one.

When you are doubtful of the right or wrong of a proposed action, it is pretty certain to be wrong.

Care of Leather in Wet Weather Urged

Especially True in Late Winter and Spring Months.

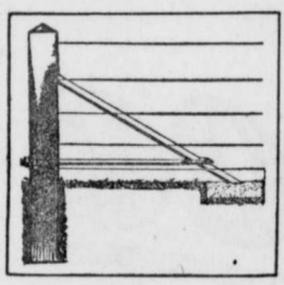

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

"The care of your leather equipment at all times, but especially during the wet winter and spring months," is the recommendation of the leather experts of the bureau of chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture. Farmers are the largest users of leather and they are vitally concerned in lengthening its life. Harness, for instance, of the proper weight and grade for the work required, should last fifteen to twenty-five years if it is not allowed to become hard or harsh, but is kept smooth and flexible by frequent washing and oiling, and has been known to last forty years.

The specialists recommend that harness be washed with tepid water and castile soap, rinsed in tepid water, and hung up to dry. While still moist it should be oiled well with neat's-foot oil or castor oil with a mixture of either with wool grease. Driving belts, machine belts and other leather articles used by the farmer will also respond to this preservative treatment with increased serviceability and money will be saved that would otherwise have to be spent in replacing them if neglected.

Grease the children's shoes and waterproof the soles so that dampness cannot enter. Then it will no longer be necessary to deny children the pleasures of outdoor life during winter and spring because of the possible danger of colds from wet feet. Formulas for making boots and shoes water resistant have been prepared by the department.

Substantial Fence Post Brace Always Desirable

Pure Bred Sires of One Breed Give Best Results

No hard and fast rules can be laid down as to how and where to buy good herd sires. It is a good plan for the beginner to get the advice and assistance of an experienced judge before making a purchase. Not every pure bred or registered sire is a good one; culls appear in the best herds. Most county agents and high school agricultural teachers are good stock judges, or at least have sufficient knowledge of breeds and herds to enable them to render valuable assistance in selecting stock. The better class of breeders will assist a new man to get a start by giving him good value for his money.

Pure bred sires give best results when always of one breed. Judicious cross-breeding may give good results for market feeding, but when cross-bred females are saved for breeding purposes their offspring do not have that uniformity of type and form that is so desirable in market stock. This is only obtained by continuing one line of breeding.

Tomato Fertilizer Tests Give Convincing Results

Results of three years' work with fertilizers on tomatoes have just been published by the New Jersey experiment station. Yields produced with 21 different complete fertilizers, each containing a total of over 16 per cent plant food (ammonia, phosphoric acid and potash) were compared with each other and with yields of unfertilized tomatoes. The fertilizer was applied at the rate of 1,000 pounds per acre, 400 pounds several days before planting and the balance three weeks after planting.

During the three-year period, the combined average yield of the seven highest yielding plots was 12 tons of tomatoes per acre, 4.8 tons more than the average yield of the unfertilized tomatoes. All things considered, a 2-8-6 fertilizer proved the most economical under the conditions governing the test.

Soy Beans Not Superior to Alfalfa as Hay Crop

While soy beans should not be considered superior to alfalfa for hay, they may be regarded as a most excellent catch crop to be seeded in the spring in places where clover or alfalfa have winterkilled, or to be grown where other legumes have not been seeded the year before. Then, too, soy beans will grow on land that is slightly sour and not well adapted for the legumes that are especially susceptible to soil acidity.

Too much adverse criticism has kept many a person from doing something really worth while. Scatter a little sunshine along your way. It certainly can't hurt, and it may help.

We'd have time enough for anything if we didn't spend so much of it doing something that doesn't amount to anything.
