AS USUAL UNCLE SAMUEL SETS WORLD PRETTY PACE

The Oregon public utility information bureau says that the use of electricity in the United is almost equal to the consumption of all the remaining countries of the world combined.

The use of manufactured gas in America is in greater measure than in all other countries. Natural gas use is almost exclusively American.

Electric railways use and development surpass by far the use and development of electric transportation throughout the remainder of the world.

The development of these services has come within the last half century.

The telephone is less than 50 years old, having been invented in 1876.

The electric light and power industry came into being a little more than two score years ago. The first central station was opened in New York in 1882.

The electric railway is the youngster of them all. The first complete electric car system was established in 1888 in Richmond, Va.

Although manufactured gas has been in use a little more than a century, its greatest employment has come within the last 20 years.

Natural gas companies to the number of 800 serve 2400 communities. In Texas a million people use natural gas.

Water supply companies, though the oldest of all public utilities, are now enjoying the greatest development in their history in America.

These utilities represent an investment in the United States of $18,000,000,000. Gross receipts of companies from rates usually amount to one-fifth of the total investment. About $3,900,000,000 is earned and paid out each year in wages, purchase of materials and interest for the use of invested funds.

Yes, Rather.

Two fashionable women were recently calling on a new neighbor and, while they were awaiting her appearance, a little girl came into the room, evidently bent upon the rescue of a doll recently abandoned there. Naturally she was viewed with some curiosity, and one of the callers, secure in the child's obviously tender age, spelled a low-voiced comment: "Not so very pre-tty." To her horror, the small maiden paused on the threshold and, fixing a contemptuous eye upon the culprit, remarked with lofty composure: "No, not so very pretty, but rather s-m-a-r-t."

Poor Henry.

"Henry Ford's got Muscle Shoals," shouted a newsboy as he raced down the street. "What's Muscle Shoals?" asked one girl of another. "I ain't sure," replied the other, "but I believe it's something like rheumatism. It's no wonder—that fellow Ford works too hard."

Dangerous Man.

"Uncle Tom," said his young nephew to an old bachelor, "tell me about some of the narrow escapes you've had from women." "Boy," was the response, "if there were any narrow escapes, the women had 'em."—Farm and Fireside.

Grand, Anyway.

"A great many indictments are being called for." "Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, "I'm getting confused. While composing a speech, instead of referring to 'the Grand Old Party' I began to talk about 'the Grand Old Jury.'"—Washington Star.

Diversified Farming Is Winning Friends

Find Stock Profitable Side Line in the West.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The effective farm trio—the cow, the hog, and the hen—have recently won many friends in a wheat-growing county of the West, Douglas county, Wash. This dry-land section had been planting wheat and buying most of its butter and eggs and using much canned milk and cream. For the last three or four years the county agricultural extension agent, leading farmers, and business men of the county have been endeavoring to bring about the gradual addition of enough live stock on the wheat farms to help feed the family and make a good contribution toward running expenses. Most of the Douglas county men have made the change in their farming systems by degrees, beginning with only a few animals, generally three or four cows, two brood sows, and about 50 chickens. As the growing of feed crops permits and skill in handling live stock develops, the flock and herds usually are built up to the amount of live stock the farm should carry.

How generally this diversified farming plan has been developed in the county is shown by the fact that instead of importing butter, eggs, and cream, as was the case three years ago, there was shipped out of the county during the year ending May 1, 1923, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, a surplus of over 6,000 cases of eggs, 18,000 pounds of butter, and 46,000 gallons of cream. In addition, it is estimated that the amount of poultry and dairy products used in the county has more than doubled in the three years.

Plowing Up Barn Lots Is Beneficial to Animals

Hog raisers may accomplish two desirable results by plowing up the barn lots at least once a year. In the first place, hogs need good succulent pasture as much of the time as possible, and in the second place, they need protection against internal parasites, such as round worms, the eggs of which remain in the soil. Turning the soil in the lots helps to get rid of the pests and the crop of forage makes it a profitable operation, writes Jack L. Baker in the Indiana Farmer's Guide. In addition to providing cheap protein feed, pasture crops aid as a laxative and require the hogs to take a certain amount of exercise which is necessary to breeding animals and growing pigs.

Rye is probably the best crop to use for winter and spring pasture for hogs. By putting in successive plantings from two to four weeks apart it is possible to have fresh pasture all the time. Seeding for pasture should be much heavier than for grain crop; from three to four bushels per acre on a good soil is best. Pasturing can begin six weeks after seeding, and may be continued if the rye is not covered with snow, until the following April.

Cultivate Acquaintance With Trees in Woodlot

Cultivate an acquaintance with your trees. In nearly every planting of any age there is need for some thinning. Exercise your best judgment as to the most desirable trees to be left permanently, space them as uniformly as possible and remove the superfluous trees. Most towns have a large number of trees that should be removed in order that the remaining ones may be developed symmetrically true to the best type of their species. Remember that isolated trees must protect themselves and the branches must shade the trunk. Sun scald is nearly always followed by an attack of borers and many trees are lost by improper pruning. An attempt to grow trees with too small trunks is likely to be fatal to many of them.

The woodlot should be carefully inspected, leaving the trees that promise to be of the most value in coming years.

Composition of Kohl-rabi Very Much Like Mangels

Kohl-rabi is very much of the same composition as mangels, but the dry matter content is lower, and since the yield is generally less than that of mangels the cost of nutrients in kohl-rabi will be higher. The value of the dry matter will be almost equal to that of grain in the ration, pound for pound but there is so much water that it is impossible to feed enough of kohl-rabi to replace grain. On the whole, kohl-rabi should occupy the same place in the ration that is occupied by mangels or other roots. Where there is a choice between growing kohl-rabi for stock or growing mangels, other things being equal, the mangels will make the most feed.

It Is Necessary to Feed Sows Plenty of Protein

The greater the number of pigs raised per sow the less the cost per pig. The unborn pig is built largely of protein, hence the necessity of feeding plenty of protein to the sow from breeding to farrowing time in order that she may produce a large, strong, thrifty, vigorous litter. The brood sow should have either one-half pound of tankage, one pound of linseed oil meal, one pound of soy beans or one gallon of skim milk or buttermilk per day to furnish the needed protein.
