EXPLANATION IS MADE OF WHAT DEFENSE DAY IS

There has been considerable contention over Defense day, scheduled for September 12, for which reason C. F. Andrews, Lt. Colonel, recruiting officer with headquarters in Portland, has issued the following explanation:

What Defense day is: It is an explanation and test of mobilization plans. These plans, made by the war department for national defense, citizens have a right to know and should know. It is democratic. Enrollment on this day is equivalent to saying, "I believe in national defense."

The primary purpose is to enable our people to visualize the initial process necessary to muster our forces in the event of a national emergency and to avoid the danger or delay should war be thrust upon us.

What Defense day is not: It is not a mobilization. It is not an enrollment for any future war and is not an obligation for service anywhere at any time.

It is not militaristic. She was not drowning; she had merely lost off her bathing cap with her false curls in it. The rescue boatman came in answer to her calls for help. "Oh, not me—my curls, save them," she pleaded piteously.

"Lady," replied the boatman modestly, "I am only a life saver, not a hair restorer."

TAHITI FARMERS ARE ENRICHED BY BEANS

Kanakas Live High as Price of Vanilla Soars.

Papeete, Tahiti.—A great demand has arisen in these western islands for bicycles and motor cars, although the roads are mere tracks.

The Chinese in Papeete have endeavored to satisfy the demand by combing all the old junk heaps for ancient bicycles and antique "tin lizzies."

A little tinkering and a few coats of paint, and the rejuvenated contrivances are ready to be exchanged for quantities of vanilla far in excess of the value proffered.

This is one of the consequences of the visitation at Papeete of "vanilla millionaires" from the Leeward group of the Society Islands. These islands escaped the plant disease that devastated the plantations of Tahiti some years ago.

Thus, when the price of vanilla beans soared recently to great heights, these islanders had full crops, for which they received sums beyond their wildest dreams.

Papeete being the Paris of the South seas, these newly-risen nabobs have been flocking here to spend their gains.

The roads in and about the city have become perilous from slivers, chartered by the week, loaded with fat Kanakas, who rush about at high speed, to the consternation of pedestrians. Their women folk are astonishing the beach dwellers with glowing silks, high-heeled shoes and picture hats.

This orgy of spending will continue until the last franc is gone. Then the natives will return happily to the peaceful shores of Ralatea and Bora Bora and resume their old pursuits of climbing the mountains for "fet" and combing the reefs for fish. But, having had a whale of a time, they will be content.

Daughter of Rasputin Makes a Visit to Paris

Maria Gregorievna, claiming to be the daughter of Rasputin, the famous evil genius of the late czarina of Russia, arrived in Paris recently after many tribulations and adventures. She claims to be one of the five legitimate children of the notorious monk.

She claims to have lived with her father in Petrograd, and each week he took her to see the czarina. She also tells of the terrible ordeals after Rasputin's death, when she was imprisoned with her brothers and sisters, and eventually sent to Siberia, from where she made her escape. She hopes to obtain some engagement on the stage, as she is a very talented girl and a good dancer.

She is shown wearing the same costume which she wore while she lived with her father, and with which she arrived in Paris.

Many Old People

Hutchinson, Kans.—Halstead, with a total population of around 1,200, has more than forty residents more than seventy-five years old, the oldest being ninety-three years of age. It is claimed the percentage of septuagenarians in Halstead is larger than any town in the state.

Find House Built of Mud 200 Years Ago

Philadelphia.—After weathering the sunshine and storms of perhaps two centuries, a two-story house, built of mud from foundation to roof, has been discovered by a building inspector and condemned.

Close examination of the unique structure, which stands at 322 Buttonwood street, revealed that builders of 200 years ago used the same methods of pouring mud into wooden molds as is used today in the construction of modern concrete buildings.

To the generations of men, women and children that have passed it, the house has stood as a landmark, but not one of noteworthy history. A week ago it was to the passing citizenry only a house on a street, "that's been there for many years."

TO CARRY ON FORESTRY RESEARCH IN OREGON

Upon a survey tour from which will be determined the best possible location for headquarters and branch stations of a forestry research laboratory for the northwest, Earl H. Clapp and T. T. Munger, of Washington, D. C., were in Lane county during the past week.

In an attempt to study the practical work of reforestation and perpetual supply of timber for the United States, the research department of the bureau of forestry, under the direction of Mr. Clapp, is establishing laboratories in several sections of the country. Those in the east have been established for some time because of the fact that the demand for reforestation is so great there. There is one in New England, another in the lake region, a third in the south Appalachians and a fourth in the south. The fifth will be established at Miss-

ROADS IN WEST LANE FOUND BY COMMISSIONERS

A story of bad roads in western Lane was brought back by Commissioners Crowe and Hurd when they returned Sunday from an inspection tour. In the northwestern part of the county some district work is being done. As they are not used by automobiles, the roads in that section of the county are very narrow and in one place the car could not stay on the grade. In another place a horseman had to ride back about two hundred yards to find a place where he could pass the car.

On the low pass road the commissioners found 11 miles of road finished and 13 miles with the grade nearly completed. This will be ready for use this winter.

What the World Is Doing

The Ideal Radio Set for Hikers

Henry Farkouh, a Brooklyn amateur, is the designer and builder of a novel radio set that should prove ideal for the hiker. It is a three-tube receiver, operating on small batteries and is complete in all details. The instruments are fastened to a canvas web belt, and each tube has its own rheostat; a potentiometer is also provided. The set has sufficient power to operate a loud speaker, and it is said that stations as far away as Chicago have been heard on it. The antenna consists of fine wire sewn between two canvas sheets so that it may be carried under the shirt, or in a pocket.

Strange Animal Being Sought in Heart of Jungle

Deep in the depths of East African jungles, the "Nandi bear," depicted by natives as a ferocious species of man-eating hyena with striped skin, is being sought by scientists. The tales of frightened villagers and fragmentary reports from hunters indicate that the animal is taller and much more powerful than the ordinary hyena.

In the last ten years, extensive explorations have resulted in the discovery of many new animals, among which the okapi, a large zebra-like creature, is regarded as the most important. Smaller animals are constantly being found and the old Roman adage, "Out of Africa, always something new" is almost daily proved true. Scientists believe, however, that there are few of the larger species that have escaped identification.

Radio Beacon Guides Aviator on Hundred-Mile Flight

Guided only by signals spoken over a radio beacon, an aviator recently flew from Dayton, Ohio, to a point one hundred miles distant, arriving there without mishap and without losing his course at any point. In his receiver he heard the letters A and T (— —) repeated over and over. As he flew along the correct course, both letters were equally loud, but the moment he got off the course to one side, or the other, one letter became noticeably louder than the other and showed him which way to turn.

Cottage Built on Auto Tourists Home Com.

Fitted upon the chassis of a small touring car, a miniature cottage supplies an Iowa contractor, his wife, and two children with luxurious quarters while on motor tours. Electric lighted throughout, the house provides ample protection from dust and rain, there is space for a cradle for the baby and other comforts of home. The front window in the roof gives the driver a full view of the road ahead and glass in the rear makes it possible to see behind. Entrance is provided by a side door and one at the rear. The radio-tor fills the screened-in "porch" which has one side on hinges so that the engine can be reached easily. The cottage weighs but little more than the enclosed body of standard type and proves an effective advertising device.

Auto Death in U. S. Every Thirty-Five Minutes

Every time the clock recorded thirty-five minutes during the last year, a person was killed on the highways of the country, and each minute, approximately three persons were injured, delegates to the convention of the American road builders were told. In twelve months highway accidents claimed a total of 15,000 lives and caused 1,700,000 injuries, according to the figures given. Uniform regulations, established by states, systematic maintenance of roads and safety education in schools were urged to curb the ever mounting number of fatalities. In Wisconsin, a road accident during the past year was said to have proved that most of them occurred on straight roads, largely due to attempts of drivers to pass one another. Railway grade crossings, however, were declared to be the most dangerous.

Monkey's Bites Test Money

Owing to the spread of counterfeit coins in Siam, monkeys are being employed in the banks to test the spurious currency, it is reported. Installed behind the counters, monkeys test the coins between their teeth. If good, no marks are left on the metal, and the coins are thrown into a box at the animal's side. Should the coins be bad, the metal bears visible marks and is thrown on the floor, later to be swept up and destroyed.
