BEULAH.

(To my sister, who passed this morning.)

Gone! And in going, There goes from our life, Our sister and mother, Our daughter and wife.

Passed! And in passing, There passes from me, Sister, your chiding, Your laughter and glee.

Slowly you faded, Day after day; Flush of vitality Ashing to grey.

Bravely you suffered Till almost the end— Scarcely an enemy, Many a friend.

Sister you told me What you had seen— Pearly gates opened, Visions between.

Calmly you lie there, Warm feels your face, Yet of your heart's beat, Never a trace.

Dead! O, Beulah! Forever at rest! O, had I come sooner! But God's way is best.

—JAY RODERIC DeSPAIN. 789 Locust Ave., Salem, Oregon. August 4, 1924.

The author of the above and his sister of whom the poem was written were once residents here.

Leonard Bacon, who was one of the best-known theologians in New England a half-century ago, was attending a conference in one of the New England cities, and some assertions he made in his address were vehemently objected to by a member of the opposition. "Why," he expostulated, "I never heard of such a thing in all my life!" "Mr. Moderator," rejoined Bacon calmly, "I cannot allow my opponent's ignorance, however vast to offset my knowledge, however small."

NOTICE TO NEIGHBORHOOD READERS:

It is the wish of The Sentinel to give all the news of the Cottage Grove country—and to give neighborhood news as close as possible to the hour of publication. In the effort to get the news at as late a moment as possible, The Sentinel often finds it physically impossible to get it all into type and for that reason has to "blue pencil" many items which it would like to print but which do not seem to be of sufficient importance to warrant holding up the printing of the paper. There are many reasons why items are sometimes omitted. An item or two, sometimes has to be "lifted," after having been put into type, because there is just room for a neighborhood letter with the one or two items omitted. The neighborhood correspondent is not to blame for exigencies which arise in the office of publication. Often the correspondent has taken great pains to get an item which has to be eliminated for one of the reasons given above, or for some other reason. The Sentinel asks its neighborhood readers to bear in mind that the neighborhood correspondent endeavors to send every available item and that The Sentinel endeavors to publish every item of interest dealing with the activities of its readers and their friends. If an item is omitted, no slight is intended, either by the correspondent or by The Sentinel. Readers will greatly assist by communicating important items to the neighborhood correspondent. The Sentinel particularly wishes unusual and good booster stories. Some way is always found to give space to them. Keep your neighborhood in the news columns. If

Seven Men Lifted by Magnet, One Hanging Downward

To demonstrate the pulling power of an industrial type of magnet used for separating metallic substances from other materials, seven men, totaling 1,150 pounds in weight, were suspended from it and lifted clear of the ground. The magnet was hoisted in a rope sling about eight feet from the floor and a metal bar was placed in contact with it. When a current of 220 volts was applied, six men grasped the bar and were lifted clear of the ground. A seventh man, into whose shoes had been placed thin metal plates, was hoisted up and held head downward.

In the last twenty-three years, only seventy-three persons have been killed in railway accidents in England. The years 1901 and 1908 were without a single fatal accident to passengers and in 1923 only one railway accident involved loss of life.

Testing Battery Polarity A simple method of determining the polarity of a battery or cell, and at the same time roughly measuring its strength, is as follows: Dissolve 1 part of potassium iodide in 25 parts of water; place the solution in a shallow dish, soak several pieces of white blotting paper in it, then remove them and allow to dry. To use, moisten a piece of the prepared paper and touch it with wires leading from both poles of the battery, keeping them about 1/2 in. apart. A dark-brown spot will immediately be produced where the wire from the positive pole touches the blotter. A dead cell or battery will produce no spot. A little experience in judging the rapidity with which the spot is formed, and the shade of the color produced, will soon enable one to tell the condition of the battery fairly accurately, whether it is nearly dead, half charged, or fully charged. This method is applicable to both storage batteries and dry cells, although the wires must be further apart in the case of storage batteries.

Size of Radio Shields When shielding is resorted to in order to eliminate interference from body capacity, etc., it is much better to use a small shield for each instrument than a large one covering the whole panel, as a loss of efficiency, due to intercapacity between the instruments, is likely to result in the latter case.
