VIKINGS' CHARTS SOURCE OF WONDER

Astonish American Naval Officers in Iceland.

Reykjavik, Iceland.—American naval officers who visited Ireland in connection with the globe-encircling flight of the American aviators, were greatly interested in the navigation methods of the old vikings who, more than 1,000 years ago, sailed their little vessels, without compasses or other instruments, across the storm-beaten north Atlantic to Iceland, Greenland and even the shores of North America.

Even today the charts of these waters are largely based on observations and soundings made by whalers and the early explorers, scores of years ago, and the few large vessels that today visit these seas proceed with the utmost caution.

Sailing directions, the "Bible of the Sea," are carefully consulted, and when new soundings are made the results are sent to the different governments for incorporation in the charts.

But when Leif Ericson and the other adventurous old Norsemen of more than ten centuries ago set out on their dangerous voyages there were no charts, and the stars were the only directional guides.

The observations they made were for centuries the only sailing directions, and were charted, in the form of sagas, as the galleys swept over the rough seas. Some of these sagas exist today, and old pilots at Reykjavik are familiar with the lore they contain.

One of these, describing the journey from Norway to Greenland, not only takes account of the physical features to be watched for, but advises the navigators to keep a lookout for the birds and whales that mark the approaches to the Icelandic coast.

A naval officer who made a study of this route found it was almost a perfect great-circle, or shortest sailing route, worked out without any scientific aids by navigators who probably could neither read nor write.

Easter Island Weathers Submarine Disturbances

Leipzig.—Easter Island, in the south Pacific, which recently was reported to have vanished in a submarine convulsion, still waves its palms in the air. Capt. Alfred Kiling sends to Illustrerte Zeitung an account of some of its peculiarities.

"In former times," the captain writes, "the tribes and clans on the island lived in constant warfare with each other. The captives were eaten. Many human bones still lie about in the caves of the island. The original Kanakas had a very queer cult, for which they built gigantic statues of lava.

"Some of these monuments carry a mysterious hieroglyphic script. There are about 555 of these giants, the tokens of former civilization.

"The island people own wild chickens and pigs.

"I could never quite find out how marital conditions were on the island. It seemed to me that marriage among members of the same household was prohibited. A violation of this law was punished by putting both offenders to death. Otherwise there was complete prenuptial freedom. Cautious fathers shut their daughters up."

Sale of Alaska Town Is Authorized by U. S.

Washington.—Sale of the town of Tenakee, on Chikofog Island, a few miles southeast of Juneau, Alaska, was authorized by the Interior department. The town has been divided into 26 blocks of 141 lots and contains approximately 78 acres. George A. Parks, assistant supervisor of public lands in Alaska, was named trustee and was directed to give residents of the town the first opportunity to purchase the lots.

Explorer's Estate to Go to University

New York.—The University of the state of New York, which is virtually the state department of education, is made the ultimate beneficiary of the entire estate of the late Herbert L. Bridgeman, author, explorer and regent of the university, in his will filed for probate in the surrogate's court, Brooklyn.

The value of the estate is described only as "over $15,000." During her life the testator's widow, Mrs. Helen Bartlett Bridgeman, 804 Carlton avenue, Brooklyn, will receive the entire income, after which the principal will be divided in two equal parts. A granddaughter, Miss Katherine Bridgeman, 126 Arlington avenue, Jersey City, will receive the income from one share, or as much of it as the trustees, the Brooklyn Trust company and Allen H. Spooner, shall consider she needs. Under similar supervision the income from the remainder will go to a grandson, Herbert Lawrence Bridgeman, of the same address.

Surplus income of any year will be paid to the university, to which the principal reverts upon the deaths of the grandchildren.

The maid had been using surreptitiously the bath tub of her employer; an elderly bishop. He was a bachelor, very fastidious about his toilet, and desired the exclusive use of his tub.
 He reprimanded the maid with much indignation:
 "What distresses me most, Mary, is that you have done this behind my back."
