MAN ARRESTED HERE ON CHARGE OF MURDER

John O'Shea in City Jail Held at Request of Sheriff at Klamath Falls.

John O'Shea, believed by local police to be the man wanted in Klamath Falls on a charge of murder, was taken into custody by G. B. Pitcher, deputy sheriff, late this afternoon.

The arrest was made following a message from the sheriff of Lake county describing a car in which four men and a woman were traveling north. The car had a temporary license from Lake county.

When stopped by Deputy Sheriff Pitcher O'Shea admitted his name but declared he had no idea why the charge should be placed against him. He told the officers he had a sheep ranch in southern Oregon and knew of no crime with which his name might be connected. He was placed in the city jail awaiting the arrival of officials from Eugene who will take him to the Lane county jail.

O'Shea and his party declared they were on their way to Portland to attend a session of the federal Grand Jury. The rest of the party proceeded on its way as O'Shea was the only man detained by the deputy sheriff. When interviewed by a representative of the press O'Shea refused to make any statement saying, "he didn't want his name broadcasted over the country in connection with a murder charge and that he didn't know anything about why he should be suspected."

The message from Klamath Falls did not state who O'Shea was charged with murdering or when the crime was committed.

Only a Go-Between.

A pretty city damsel was spending the summer on the R. F. D. route and the village postmaster was a little afraid she might damage the heart of his youthful carrier. So he called the young man in for a conference.

"Now, Abner, don't take that summer boarder too seriously."

"I won't."

"She may mean no harm," continued the postmaster, "but she's a bit of a flirt. I know for a fact that she has love and kisses sent her from three city fellows."

"That's all right," said the young carrier, "all I do is deliver 'em."—Pittsburgh Post.

A small boy during his first eventful meal in a restaurant suddenly became greatly engrossed in a man at the next table who was regaling himself with waffles. He turned to his parents and announced in a shrill voice:

Thirty Thousand Acres of Trees Used Yearly for Toothpicks

Approximately 30,000 acres of trees are necessary for the manufacture of the toothpicks used yearly in the United States alone, according to government estimates. Maple and hickory are the chief kinds of wood used, although sweet and yellow birch are employed in some localities. After being felled, the logs are sawed into bolts, twenty-eight inches long. These are then steamed and cut into strips of veneer or thin sticks which are divided into ribbons, three inches wide. Eight or ten of these are run through machines that clip them into splinters of regulation toothpick size and shape and they are then boxed, each container holding about 1,500. Michigan, Maine, Ohio and Oregon are the principal sources of the supply.

Include in curtain talk. We have done the best we could in preparing for this entertainment and hope you will like it. I understand that even some of the cast are anxious about the outcome. A nervous-looking young man rushed into the corner grocery at six-thirty this evening and said to Mr. Jones:

"I want to buy all the stale eggs you got."

"Well," Mr. Jones said, "we don't usually sell stale eggs, we dump 'em, but if you—"

The young man interrupted him. "I must have all you got," he insisted. Mr. Jones smiled, and said:

"You must be going to see Hamlet to-night."

"Hush!" said the nervous-looking young man leaning over the counter. "I am Hamlet!" (Substitute leading role.)
