Legislative Sidelights

By ELBERT BEDE.

STATE CAPITOL, Salem, Ore., Jan. 20—(Special).—State Market Agent Spence has arrived at the session, something he usually does nothing else but biennially. He still carries his head high and located at the usual place on top of his shoulders, despite the introduction of bills in both house and senate providing for his decapitation. The farmer members are opposing the state market agent's office and the general opinion here seems to be that the office has merely provided the governor with another cog for his machine, with no resultant benefits to the people who pay the letter-writing, La Follette-boosting market agent's salary of $275 the month. Anyway Spence is a pleasant fellow to have around the lobbies, provided he is opposing what you want, which he usually is.

“A message from the governor,” the presiding officer announced. “What now?” asked a new member. “Has he a certain lecture for us?” “The governor has signed house bill No. 32,” the reading clerk announced, and the new member gave forth a great sigh of relief.

A collier, the dictionary says, is a bearer of burdens. However, Representative Collier, of Klamath, formerly of Eugene, says he, so far as possible, is going to let the other fellows do the worrying.

M. H. Anderson, Cottage Grove timber dealer, was here today sizing up the timber of the two houses but found nothing that he thought he could dispose of in the present sluggish market.

Milt Miller, perpetual candidate for the democratic nomination for United States senator, has been about the lobby holding a conference with Governor Walt to decide who shall be the candidate who shall be the candidate against Stanfield two years hence. Milt couldn't look any more senatorially sanctified even had he been successful in his aspirations to try his pulchritudinous presence upon the Washington solons.

Bill Strayer, who is proud of being a democrat, pulled a good one yesterday. He told one of the feminine clerks of the session that he had just been reading a terrible news item. “What was it?” she anxiously inquired. “Why it says in the report of Sunday's weather that the wind blow up the Willamette. I suppose that next it will be blowing up the legislature. Bill isn't a dyed-in-the-wool democrat—because there is no wool where the wool ought to grow.

Representative Kilham lost $380 in a robbery at Portland Saturday night, when the office of the Kilham Stationery company was entered. Before that he had believed the newspaper stories to the effect that all the thieves were at Salem.

Those who read newspaper accounts of what is going on under the big dome at Salem should bear in mind that because a bill is introduced it does not follow that it is to become law. Some readers get the idea that a bill that gets notice has become the law of the land, while the facts are that many bills haven't as much chance of becoming law as the tallow-legged cat had of making a safe journey through the steam-heated place down below.

Senator Fred Fisk is the William Jennings Bryan of the senate—with reservations. Fisk is of the same political faith, has much the same regard for grape juice and the resemblance to the great commoner is remarkable; which isn't saying much for the pulchritude of either. The reservations are mostly along the oratorical line. Fisk is not a forensic senator and is partly responsible for the short sessions of the present session.

Members of the legislature are worrying about Governor Pierce's bald-faced calves. He didn't mention them in his biennial message and they have received no consideration by the ways and means committee.

Representative A. R. Henter is not depressed by the fact that he is the only democratic member of the house. He gets about as much real pleasure out of a session as any of them and more than most of them. Despite the fact that he is one of the quietest members of the lower body, he has the record for the introduction of resolutions upon facetious subjects. Joe Singer, the veteran if not venerable, sergeant-at-arms is the object of most of hunter's little jokers. The latest resolution by Hunter upon the usual subject requested the sergeant-at-arms to remain prayerfully on the job over the recent week-end to watch the probing of Prohibition Officer Cleaver and to make certain that nothing was left on Monday morn to terrify the legislators. Whether or not Joe remained on the job, nothing of a terrifying nature was found here this morning.

The total eclipse of the sun, due for Saturday, means nothing to the legislative assembly, which has been enjoying eclipses and everything else in the state for the past 10 days—not excepting Governor Walt and his famous bald-faced calves. Few legislators will see the eclipse, which starts at sunrise.

Representative Settlemier of Marion, is accustomed to getting what he wants when he wants it. He notified Sergeant-at-arms Singer today that he would expect an ash tray at his desk, a fresh box of matches always on hand and a fresh cigar each morning. With that in a few minutes the cigar and matches were provided, the latter at the expense of the state and the cigar probably at the expense of some lobbyist who had gotten the idea that the speaker and president were merely Singer's messenger boys.

Representative Potter, of Lane, has gotten the best of a boil that had been bothering him for a week and is now wearing a collar and assuming legislative dignity. So far that is about all he has found to assume.

The most frequent question asked in the legislative halls is, “When is somebody going to start something?” The answer usually is, “I don't know,” but it is plain that the session will be in full swing before the end of the week and that all proposed legislation will be in the hopper or will be known to be forthcoming.

Ike Patterson, former senator, former chairman of the ways and means committee, now dirt farmer and chairman of the state republican committee, has been a frequent visitor in the lobbies. He denies having gubernatorial or senatorial aspirations, but his manner of denial suggests that his feelings have not been seriously injured by the suggestion.

Kap Kubli, former speaker, is here today—just to look things over, he says. He believes that Speaker Burdick is doing as well as he did and probably would make as successful a senatorial candidate.

The joint ways and means committee and roads and highway committee hold their first sessions tonight, and the session may now be considered as fairly on its way. These committees will have the hardest grinds of any one of the session. Outside of appropriations, nothing of more importance than highway legislation has appeared.

Oz West, former governor, is here today—and it is certain that he is not here for the amusement of the thing. It is taken for granted that he would not be averse to having the legislature take some action towards the continued guarantee of interest on the bonds of the north unit, for which he is the legal representative. Oz had an even more turbulent time when he was governor than Walt is having now. Both are democrats, and democrats seem to have a penchant for turbulent times.
