Water Denizen That Has Few Vital Organs

The little creature called the lancelet is slender and pointed at both ends, and not very easy to see, since it is almost transparent, and is only from an inch and a half to two and a half inches in length.

It lives in shallow water and likes to stick its head end into the sand, into which it burrows with great rapidity. It remains thus for a long time with its tail sticking out. When on the surface of the water it lies on its side.

While it can neither see nor hear, there is reason for believing that it possesses the sense of smell and taste. Its eggs are laid about sunset and the larvae hatch out early the next morning.

The lancelet has no head. Moreover, it has neither legs nor pairs of fins. It has a mouth, however, placed at one end, which, therefore, may be called the head end of the body.

It has a stomach, a very simple form of liver and another simple organ which takes the place of a heart, since it is capable of contracting and thus forcing the blood, which is quite colorless, forward to the area of the gills, where it is purified.—Review of Reviews.

Business Now Made of Producing Spider Silk

Spider farming is one of the little known industries of modern times. The end in view is not the intensive fighting of the fly peril, but the production of spider silk, than which there is nothing better for the cross lines of surveying and other instruments.

Supplies in vastly larger quantities are needed for the manufacture of spider-silk stockings, and it is to meet this demand that special spider farms have been started from time to time, says Tit-Bits.

It is no easy matter to keep and feed the spiders, to prevent them from engaging in mortal combat, and to collect their silk in suitable form. The process of "silking" the spider amounts to playing catchball, with the spider as the ball.

In its passage through the air the spider instinctively pays out silk, and it can be induced to part with a hundred yards or more during a succession of such flights.

"Secret Safe" "Oh, Alice!" Virginia exclaimed, "have you heard about Gladys?" "No; what about her?" Alice demanded.

"Well, she and Dick Rodney are going to be married in June!" "You don't say! Well, I always knew Dick thought a lot of Gladys. But I never did think she would agree to marry him."

"And Alice," Virginia continued, "the engagement is a secret just now. I promised Gladys I wouldn't tell a living soul, so don't you breathe a word of it to anyone."

"Why, Virginia," Alice replied, "you know I wouldn't say a word of telling it than you would!"

"Genuine Article" Salesmen may be gracious and cheerful, and yet lack knowledge of the goods they are expected to sell. This is a sad fault and a handicap to good salesmanship. A love story is told of a genial storekeeper in central Ohio whose education in selling was the kindergarten variety. A customer came in and asked for a little cheesecloth.

The storekeeper disappeared, but came back lugging a large specimen of a New York cheese. "Here's the cheese," he said, "but I'll be ding-busted if I know how I'm goin' to get the cloth offen it!"

"Bog Ornaments Irish Asset" One of the industries of Ireland has long been the manufacture of bog oak ornaments. Before the period of upheaval in Ireland the export of these goods from the Emerald Isle through the port of Dublin equaled a value of $100,000 a year. The trade originated in the reign of George IV, soon after his visit to Ireland in 1821, London Tit-Bits says. At first all the ornaments were hand carved and polished, but machinery was used with the increasing demand. Yew, fir and birch, as well as oak, are woods used by the makers of the ornaments. The only necessity is that the logs shall have been long buried in the bogs.

"Wedding Season in India" Customs in India bring annually a wedding season, marriages being practically unknown at other seasons. The wedding bells there ring from summer to late autumn, and the bride must wear gold and silver trinkets and decorations, no man being so poverty stricken as to contemplate marriage without making the silver and gold presents. The metal must be imported from other countries, and this year there has been sent from New York to London for India more than $2,000,000 each of gold and silver.—Ohio State Journal.

"From Pillar to Post" "From pillar to post" means from one thing to another without any definite purpose, hither and thither, to and fro, from one court of appeal to another without any decision. The origin of the expression is somewhat obscure. Some authorities say it refers to the tennis court. Others believe it to be an allusion to the schools of horsemanship in France before the Revolution. The pillar was the center of the riding ground and the posts were the columns around the circumference of the ring.—Pittsburgh Magazine.

"An Omission" Mr. Justwed—Yes, dearie, these cakes are really delicious, but, as you say, they are a little bit flat. His Wife—And I followed the recipe exactly, but it didn't say a word about how to inflate them.

Seasonable Good Things

VERY delicious combination for a cake is chocolate layer cake with an orange filling. One may use any simple recipe for the cake and the filling below:

Orange Layer Cake.—Cream together one cupful of butter and two cupfuls of sugar. To this add three egg yolks, one at a time, beating vigorously after each addition. Sift together three cupfuls of pastry flour and two tablespoonfuls of baking powder. Add the flour alternately with one cupful of milk and mix thoroughly. Last of all add five stiffly beaten egg whites and bake in three layers. When cold put together with:

Orange Filling.—Boil together one-third of a cupful of water, one-half cupful of sugar, and the grated rind of two oranges. Combine one tablespoonful of lemon juice, two-thirds cupful of orange juice, two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, three well-beaten egg yolks; add to the first mixture and cook until it thickens. Remove from the fire and add one tablespoonful of butter. When partly cool spread between the layers. Cover the top of the cake with:

Orange Icing.—Boil together one cupful of sugar, one-third of a cupful of water and the grated rind of one orange. Cook to the soft-boiled stage and pour over a stiffly beaten egg white. Beat until thick enough to spread without running.

A good way to hold a thick frosting on top of a cake is to pin a three-inch band of buttered paper around the cake, pour over the frosting and leave the paper on until the frosting hardens.

Three-Layer Cake.—Cream one-half cupful of shortening; gradually add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar. Sift together two cupfuls of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder; add to the butter mixture, alternately with three-fourths of a cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of vanilla and the whites of four eggs, beaten stiff. When thoroughly blended bake in three layers. (© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)
