Marriages That Led to Odd Relationships

Mysterious muddles sometimes arise out of second marriages. A Corvallis girl married a man whose first wife was the sister of the girl's grandmother. This makes her her own mother's grand-aunt and her grandmother's sister-in-law. To her brothers and sisters she is a great-aunt. Finally, she is her own grand-niece. Her husband is the brother-in-law of his grandnephews and grand-nieces.

An elderly American became the grandfather of his six children, and his first wife's stepfather. He divorced his wife and married his mother-in-law. The widower who married in succession seven sisters contracted various relationships, says the Montreal Family Herald and Star. This man started by marrying the eldest of the sisters, and subsequently went right down the line. Finally he led the seventh and last sister to the altar.

A German village is puzzled over the relationships resulting from the double marriage of a father and a son. The father, a widower, married the village belle. She thus became a stepmother to her husband's forty-year-old son. The son in his turn met the girl's mother and married her. Consequently his father is now his son-in-law and he himself is his own grandfather. In the meantime, the village belle presented her husband with a baby daughter. Clearly this child is sister-in-law to her grandmother!

Swing Plays Part in Hindu Religious Rites

One often finds in the near vicinity of a Hindu temple, says a writer in an Indian paper, two high stone pillars, sometimes 90 feet high, with upon chains of exercises should be greatly appreciated. In certain seasons, especially the harvest season, the swing is in great demand, and religious ceremonies are performed by the priests of the temple. On the top bar of the swing it is not unusual to find a number of earth-unwary chatters, which are the home of the sacred pigeons connected with the temple.

These swings are often built in the middle of the street, and they not infrequently constitute a real obstacle to traffic. But the authorities would certainly have great difficulty in persuading the temple people to agree to the removal of them.

Death in Triumph

Edouard Remenyi was a famous Hungarian violinist who made several world tours and settled in New York for some years. He died of apoplexy on the stage of the Orpheum theater, San Francisco, on May 15, 1908. This was his first appearance on the vaudeville stage and he was enthusiastically received on playing two or three classical pieces. He responded with "Old Glory," which created tremendous applause. Then he commenced to play Debussy's "Etretat," but after a few measures he fainted over and then fell forward on his face, dead. It is interesting to know that at one time the composer, Brahms, traveled with Remenyi and acted as his accompanist.

Hard to Fit

A city man, driving his automobile along a little-used country road, heard something rattle beneath his car, stopped, looked back and saw a bright metal object lying in the road a short distance behind. It was a plowpoint, evidently lost by some farmer.

It was fully half an hour before the next car came along, and its occupant, seeing the first car flat on his back under his vehicle by the roadside, stopped and asked what the trouble was.

The city man emerged and held up the plowpoint.

"This blooming thing dropped off my car," he said, "and I've been hunting for half an hour to find out where it belongs."—Exchange.

Chinese Societies

Chinese tong societies, organizations with an element of secrecy, of protection and assistance. Basically, they are of a commercial character, the members being engaged in business, and they are thus rival trade associations. This rivalry occasionally breaks out into open warfare when aggressions by one tong against another, consisting of unfair commercial practices, boycotts, etc., give the rival tong cause for offense. The tongs in the United States are branches of wider organizations, having their main headquarters in Shanghai and Peking, China, and branches exist in other nations besides the United States.

"Hard" and "Soft" Water

Hard water is water which contains dissolved in it certain substances which interfere with the action of soap by forming with it an insoluble compound or curd. The hardness of natural waters is principally due to the salts of calcium and magnesium, especially calcium carbonate, which produces temporary hardness, removable by boiling, and calcium sulphate, which causes permanent hardness. Soft water is characterized by the practical absence of substances which prevent the formation of lather with soaps.

The Situation

"What's the matter with your business?"

"Our officials have too many sporty relatives holding down important positions. What we need is more young blood and fewer young bloods."

Gentle Maiden Sees and Enjoys Football Game

Oh, that football got his face kicked in. Oh, how sweetly pretty I just know he's happy. Now he can lie still in the hospital and read and hear the birdies sing and be glad, oh, so glad.

Oh, goodie. Those two big Swedes are jumping up and down on the quarterback. Just like boys at play. How glad the Swedes look. And how happy the little quarterback looks that he can make them so glad. Oh, football is so lovely, so bloody lovely, reports Outing Magazine.

Oh, joy. No wonder the birdies sing and the flowers are gay. They have knocked the center cold. See, his left leg is broken, quite broken. And oh, rapture! I think his neck is hurt, too. How pleased all the others are. They are singing and cheering. They're so happy.

Oh, what a delightful picture! That big blond giant just kicked at the ball and missed it and his great foot landed in that other player's stomach, quite lost from sight. The band plays. No wonder. There! He has got his foot out again. Now they can both be glad.

Likes and Dislikes for Various Kinds of Food

Many races, many foods, many fads. The likes of one people is the bane of another. An attempt is being made to introduce snails as an article of food in certain London restaurants. The French, of course, regard snails as a delicacy, while Britsiders almost shudder at the thought of eating them! Yet English folks eat mussels, whelks and winkles which in some countries are regarded as being unfit for human consumption. In England the eel is relished by many people, but in Scotland it is detested by nearly everybody. Rabbits are looked upon as vermin in some parts of America and Australia and are seldom served at table. In Britain rabbit pie is a favorite dish. Swede turnips are often eaten in Scotland and Canada with other vegetables, whereas in some parts of England they are cordially disliked and given only to cattle. Turnip-tops in Scotland, again, are not considered worth cooking. But in Covent Garden they sell by the ton.—London Mail.

Growth of Jellyfish

The manner in which a jellyfish produces its "children" is really wonderful.

In most cases the beginning is an egg, which, lying on the bottom, produces a beautiful tree-like growth. The "tree" fastens itself to the bottom and brings forth buds which, when ripe, drop off and develop into jellyfish. The latter, in turn, lay eggs and the process is repeated, as told in London Tit-Bits.

In some of the very large species have a different way of reproducing themselves. The egg is set free in the water and develops into a pear-shaped larva, which for a while swims about rapidly, being provided with hair-like appendages that serve the purpose of ears. Then the larva settles down, anchors itself to the bottom, increases in size rapidly and finally splits up into thin, flat discs which swim off and grow up into large jellyfishes.

Horses Repay Kindness

It is said the Arabs were the first to appreciate a horse's intelligence and to treat him accordingly. They kept the history of their horses written on tablets of ivory and traced their parentage back to the time of the pharaohs. They were extremely thoughtful of the comfort of the horse and it was even said they took better care of their horses than they did of their families. Constant companionship made the Arabian horse quick to understand the meaning of words, and kindness made them fearless, brave and obedient. The intelligence of the horse varies just as it does in other animals, or even people, and is developed or retarded according to man's treatment of him, says a bulletin of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Almond's Queer Habits

The almond tree has peculiar whims. It seems to prefer California as its habitat, as 98 per cent of the almonds grown in America are produced in that state, and in a rather restricted territory at that. The bulk of the crop is grown around Banning, says Nature Magazine. It seems to require the spots where extremes of cold and heat are present in their respective seasons, and photographs have been taken of an orchard with snow on the ground on the first of February, and again with the trees in full bloom on the 20th day of the month. The same variety will not fertilize one another. Growers must plant alternating rows of hardshells and papershells in order to insure a harvest.

True Poetry

The first true or inspired poetry is always from within, not from without. The experience contained in it has been spiritually transmuted from lead into gold. It is severely logical, the most trivial of its adornments being subservient to, and suggested by, the dominant idea; and its departure from whose dictates would be the "falsifying of a revelation." It is unadorned with world wisdom, deference to prevailing opinions, mere talent or cleverness. Its music is the expression of the law of its growth; so that it could no more be set to a different melody than could a rose-tree be consummated with lilacs or violets.—James Thomson.

But Not Now

"Prices are beginning to come down now, miss. Two years ago them eggs would have cost you double."

"Two years ago, when these eggs were fresh, they would have been worth it."

Hell in the Making.

The newly appointed pastor of a negro church faced a packed audience when he arose to deliver his sermon on this burning question: "Is There a Hell?"

"Brethren," he said, "de Lord made the world round like a ball."

"Amen!" agreed the congregation.

"And the Lord made two axles for de world to go round on, and He put one axle at the north pole and one axle at the south pole."

"Amen!" cried the congregation.

"And the Lord put a lot of oil and grease in de center of de world so as to keep the axles well greased and oiled."

"Amen!" said the congregation.

"And then a lot of sinners dig wells in Pennsylvania and steal de Lord's oil and grease. And they dig wells in Kentucky, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas, and in Mexico and Russia, and steal de Lord's oil and grease."

"And some day dey will have all of de Lord's oil and grease, and dem axles is gonna git hot. And den, dat will be hell, brethern, dat will be hell!"—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

No Cause for Anxiety.

Father had been cleaning the bedroom windows outside, when little Muriel came in from the garden, and said, "Mother, did you hear the ladder fall down just now?"

"No," replied the mother.

"Well," said the child, "it fell down and broke three flower pots. I told daddy you'd be cross."

"Oh, dear," said mother, "I hope your daddy hasn't hurt himself!"

"I don't think he has yet," said little Muriel; "he's still hanging on to the window sill."—Ex.
