What NEW YORK Learned

Whatever has been said for or against newspaper advertising. New York learned, during the time the newspapers could give no advertising on account of the pressmen's strike, exactly what it means to be left without newspaper advertising of the daily sales. Even Wall street, which takes but a comparatively small corner of the New York newspaper space, learned that its customers depend upon the newspaper announcements of financial offerings, and several large money offerings were postponed until newspaper advertising could be had.

Stores depending on special sales were most seriously affected. In lieu of newspaper ads the stores sent out printed circulars, but these were not nearly so effective as the ads, the managers admitted.

In the words of Hearn W. Street, one of the executives of Blair & company, a leading banking house:

"Investment bankers were not certain until the pressmen's strike began that newspaper advertising played a big part in their business. We know now what invaluable service the newspapers render us. It is next to impossible to put over a big bond issue without advertising. Our clients expect advertising and will not bother to read circulars."

The experience of New York in her "newsless" days should be of infinite value to anyone who doubts the effectiveness of newspaper advertising.
