OLD-FASHIONED BUSINESS MEN.

The members of the Progressive Business Men's club of Portland must be old-fashioned. They have adopted resolutions pledging themselves to law observance and pledging themselves to urge others to do likewise. They declare that the preservation of these United States depends upon greater respect for the laws under whose protection we live. Not a new idea but not a bad one.

Law observance alone is stressed in the resolution. Nothing is said about law enforcement. Law observance by the great majority will bring about law enforcement. Observance of the law by the great majority will strengthen the arm of the law. Laws can not be enforced when a great majority are engaged in concealing ways of defeating the law.

Each of us may have some particular law which he wishes to disregard. The larger number probably wish to overstep traffic regulations. A large number wish to evade the prohibition laws. And the larger number of these who are considered respectable citizens and the bulwarks of the communities in which they live.

But the murderer may wish to pick the law which he shall be permitted to evade.

The thief may wish to pick the law which he shall be permitted to evade.

The libertine may wish to pick the law which he shall be permitted to evade.

And by the time each of us has selected the law which he shall be permitted to evade, we shall have little law observance left.

The Progressive Business Men's club has started a good move. Law observance by the majority of so-called respectable people is the surest way to bring about law enforcement and moral conditions such as the great majority of us believe should prevail.

Of course the members are old-fashioned, but a little of the good old-fashioned stuff is likely to prove good for us. We are a trifle too progressive in many ways.

The editor of the Gold Hill News was struck by lightning a few days ago—and he was affected much as he would have been affected had a delinquent subscriber paid a ten-year subscription. He went down and out. Commenting upon the incident, the editor said: "Say, friends, that's the way to die—it didn't hurt a bit until I woke up." That is the way it is going to be with a lot of us. The only difference will be that the flashes will be with us when we awaken.

It is a pleasure to have the opportunity to pat Governor Pierce on the back. We must admire the backbone he displays when mawkish appeals are made to him to intervene to save the necks of those who were in no way restrained by sentiment when they planned to take the lives of others.

Daring flyers wing way to top of world, screams a headline over a news story from New York. That was several days ago, but they haven't arrived here yet.

The state is approaching the limit of its capacity to finance higher education.—The Oregonian.

ECHOED FROM THE CORNER.

It happened at the "kickers' table." "My sister," said one of the men, "must have an escort if she walks on Washington street from Broadway to Fifth. Otherwise she will be insulted by the ogling stares and whispered comments of street corner loafers. Where are the police?"

A physician retorted, "I discount your complaint 73 per cent. Most of the young women, and some of their elders, who walk on busy business streets in Portland have put themselves beyond insult. They dress in such a manner that they leave nothing to the imagination. They are so noticeable they have ceased to attract notice."

The first speaker again took up the cudgels. "My sister doesn't dress or act conspicuously," he said.

"And that," replied the physician, "is just the reason she attracts notice. Let a girl with rolled stockings, short skirts, peek-a-boo waist and over-confident manner pass along and she won't get a second glance. But if a woman dressed as they used to dress, with skirts to the ground and collar to the ears, came along, you'd hear a buzz all along the street."

Are you for dress reform? If so, with whose viewpoint would you agree?

SOCIETY

The Tuesday Bridge club held its regular 1 o'clock luncheon this week at the Gray Goose tea room, with Mrs. F. L. Grannis as hostess. The centerpiece of the table was a pretty bouquet of mixed wild flowers artistically arranged in a green glass basket. Score cards served also as place cards. Following the luncheon the hostess took the guests to her home, where the afternoon hours were pleasantly spent at bridge. Mrs. S. S. Lasswell won high honors. Wild flowers were the attractive decorations of the rooms. Mrs. B. G. Koehler was an invited guest of the club.

Mrs. George O. Knowles was hostess Tuesday to the O. L. H. club at its regular afternoon of five hundred. A tempting two-course luncheon was served at the close of the card session. California poppies made an attractive centerpiece for the table and they were also placed about the dining room. Rhododendrons were the artistic decorations of the other rooms. Mrs. D. H. Hemenway will be hostess for the next meeting, June 9.

Mrs. Herbert Eakin was hostess yesterday afternoon to the Presbyterian missionary society. Mrs. F. E. Mendenhall and Mrs. R. A. Trask, who attended the Willamette valley presbytery held recently in Albany, gave reports of the meeting. Mrs. Richardson gave an interesting talk on southern mountaineers, with whom she neighbored for many years. The rooms were attractively decorated with large poppies. Dainty refreshments were served.

About forty members were present at the regular meeting of the Methodist ladies' aid society yesterday afternoon for which Mrs. G. B. Arnest, Mrs. D. W. Sturges, Mrs. Charles Cooley and Mrs. Ed Conner were hostesses. After the short business session the afternoon hours were pleasantly spent socially. The rooms were transformed into a pretty garden of wild and cultivated flowers. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

Mrs. C. C. Cruson entertained the M. P. G. club Tuesday afternoon at a picnic at the foot of Corro Gordo as a diversion from the usual form of entertainment. The afternoon hours were pleasantly spent socially. Delightful picnic refreshments were served. The hostess was assisted by her sister, Miss Minnie Wilcox.

Mrs. Gertrude Whitsett and W. A. Ward entertained the members of the junior high track team at dinner Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Whitsett. Rhododendrons were artistically placed about the rooms and were used as the centerpiece of the table. Additional guests were Dalton Ward and Robert Harrington.

Joel Branson and his sister, Mrs. Wheeler, and the latter's daughter, of Dunsmuir, Calif., who were en route home from Aberdeen, Wash., were luncheon guests Monday of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Miller, until recently of Aberdeen, Wash.

The LaComus club will hold its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. J. Kem.

Comparison of French and English Housewives

It is said that the French woman's only thoughts concern food and money. She certainly manipulates the former with great skill and, as is well known, her savings are the backbone of her country. Whenever a fresh loan is floated in France long queues of housewives are always waiting outside the banks with their money.

In running a household in France one soon finds out that the maids must be well fed. They will not put up with sleeping accommodations which British maids would not tolerate, but there is no compromise on food, says a writer in London Answers.

A cook, though she will keep her pots and pans spotlessly clean, will not wash a floor with much zeal. The hardest-working French women, it is interesting to note, have, as a rule, perfectly kept hands.

French women tell me that there is more love in a French home than in a British one, and that they are more concerned with the family well-being than we are.

Gossip, largely keenly critical in character, is rife among better-class French women. Their talk, indeed, is criticism, criticism, and always criticism. There is jealousy for the woman who looks nice and laughter for the one who doesn't. A French woman will not admit to age until it is really upon her. Then, socially, she becomes indeed a back number.

Spirit is said to be the keynote of a French woman's character. Armed with it, she never admits defeat, whether in the world of commerce or of conquest. And this spirit, with which she "downs" a rival, enables her also to cheer on her husband to fame and fortune.

A GOOD SHOW.

It has been quite a time since a good tent show played in Cottage Grove, so the news that W. J. Harvall's original "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company is to exhibit here on Wednesday, June 3, will be welcomed by our citizens.

W. J. Harvall has offered his production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" to the public for the past thirty years and has been recognized as the only manager who produces the time honored drama in its entirety. Played just as written, not one line, act, scene or character omitted, using spectacular scenic effects and wonderful mechanical devices. Positively the most perfect east and production ever offered of Harriett Beecher Stowe's famous story.

W. J. Harvall's company numbers nearly fifty people and a train of motor cars, trucks and trailers are used to transport this mammoth aggregation from town to town. Playing in their big waterproof tent seating more than 2000 people.—8:15 p. m., Fifth and Whiteaker.
