

From Friend to Friend

Never a week passes but the Bank of Cottage Grove gets new customers on the strength of what one friend has told another about our service.

Such kindness is difficult to repay. But the Bank of Cottage Grove is doing its best to prove worthy, by making its service increasingly attractive to old friends and new.

If "Bank of Cottage Grove Service" Means Anything to You, Tell Your Friends About It.

The method was as follows: The landlord provided a number of metal discs and these were drawn one by one from a green baize bag by the landlord's small daughter. This little girl would, in the ordinary way, plunge her hand into the bag, rummage around for a few seconds with her eyes shut, and then bring out a disc. This would win the first prize, usually a fine fat turkey.

On the occasion in question, however, she took such a long time to make her choice that her father said, "Hurry up, child."

"I can't find the hot one, daddy," she replied.

Resin and Turpentine Put to Various Uses

Resin and turpentine have been produced on this continent since 1662. These commodities were gathered and exported by the early colonists. While they were originally used for caulking wooden vessels and protecting rope rigging, thus gaining their name of "naval stores," chemistry has developed many uses for resin and turpentine, making them indispensable in a large number of important industries, says the Montreal Star. Soap manufacture leads in consumption of resin, with surfacing of writing and printing paper ranking second. Resin is also extensively used in the manufacture of varnishes, waterproofing compounds, roofing materials, leather dressings, lubricants, waxes, linoleum and electric insulation. Turpentine is an important industrial factor as a thinner for paint, solvent for inks, waxes, rubber and waterproofing compounds, as well as in chemical and pharmaceutical combinations.

Sea Cucumber a Fish

The sea cucumber is really a living creature and not a vegetable. Its other names are the trepan or holothurian. The body of this strange dweller in the sea is composed of a muscular tissue covered with warts or spines, and which generally resemble in shape their vegetable namesake, says the Boston Globe.

Sea cucumber is considered a great luxury among the Chinese, Malays and other Eastern peoples, and its gathering and preparation for the market is a flourishing industry among the islands of the Pacific. White men who have eaten sea-cucumber soup declare it to be delicious. The trepans, which grow from ten to fifteen inches long, are gathered from coral reefs. They are then boiled, dried in the sun and hung over a fire, which gives them a smoky taste.

Couldn't Be Fooled

When Bobbie was six he was given a real watch, which, regardless of quality or accuracy, had a delightfully loud tick. Naturally, the little fellow was inordinately proud and would stroll up and down Wilshire boulevard, stopping every moment or two to draw the time-piece from his pocket and regard it gravely.

Every passerby got a real kick out of Bobbie's performance, but the climax came when Betty Compton tripped along and asked the little chap what time it was.

Bobby regarded his watch perplexedly for a moment and then replied, with dignity: "Two inches to four."—Los Angeles Times.

Himalayan Horsechestnut

The original horsechestnut, Aesculus hippocastanum, is the hardiest of the whole genus and one of the most beautiful trees in the world, says a bulletin of the Arnold Arboretum. It was brought to America at least 100 years ago and there are many noble specimens in cities and towns of the eastern states. The Himalayan horsechestnut and the species of central China are not hardy here, and the Arboretum has not succeeded in obtaining seeds of the north China species, Aesculus chinensis, which will probably flourish in this latitude.

Crab Found in Book

In the matter of odd bookmarks between the pages of a returned volume, one librarian claimed the blue ribbon by citing a slice of raw bacon which one of his assistants had salvaged from a copy of Mr. Service's poems.

But his claim was instantly given second place when the chief of a famous library in a great manufacturing city countered with a soft-shell crab which turned up between the leaves of a book on engineering.—The Outlook.

SPANISH WAR VETS ARE TO ORGANIZE

Local Camp to Be Mustered at Saturday Meeting

A local camp of U. S. Spanish War Veterans will be organized and instituted at a ceremonial to be held in Phillips hall at 8 o'clock Saturday evening. Commander George F. A. Walker, Assistant Adjutant U. G. Worrlow, Inspector Lefe H. Manning, all of Portland, and other dignitaries of the department of Oregon will be present to conduct the ceremonial and guests are expected from Portland, Eugene and other valley cities.

The public generally is invited to attend and a special invitation has been extended to the G. A. R., W. R. C., American Legion, the Legion Auxiliary and other patriotic societies.

A short program, including musical numbers by the William Stinnett orchestra, an address by Mayor George O. Knowles, and a reception, with light refreshments, will follow the ceremonial.

It is anticipated that between 20 and 25 veterans will become charter members of the new camp.

Has Ripe Tomatoes on July Fourth

M. L. Snell, 443 north Douglas street, wins the prize for the first ripe tomatoes grown in a home garden. He had ripe ones on July 4 from plants set out in April. Many do not set out their plants until that date. Last year Mr. Snell had ripe tomatoes on July 22 but another resident reported having them earlier. This year he decided to be the first.
