Chinaman Takes Meals at His Convenience

Among the working class of China, as well as many other countries of the Far and Near East, eating is an outdoor sport. Summer and winter they take their food from little open-air side restaurants, and chopstick it into their mouths, sometimes standing, sometimes sitting, either in the street or in a doorless, windowless shelter beside the street. The eating goes on continuously. This does not mean, of course, that every workman eats all day long—as it might seem—but each workman eats when he can, and the restaurants are busy every hour of the day, knowing no separate time for lunch, breakfast, dinner or supper. On the main street there are restaurants every few steps, a dozen or so to the block. Then there are the walking kitchens. One man carries on a pole slung over his shoulders a cook stove suspended from one end, and a pantry with a counter on top of it on the other end. He moves his stand from time to time, going where business is best for the moment, now in front of a factory, now in front of a school, now on a busy corner, almost anywhere. The keepers of the large restaurants, by way of advertising, establish their bakeries right beside the street in full view of the perhaps hungry passer-by. The baker, a mighty man is he, standing beside his two-by-two monument of brick, kneading a mountain of dust grayed dough, then beating it out flat with a stick, like a lusty drummer-lad beating a charge to battle.

Queer Contributions to Medical Science

The Warwickshire county councillor who bequeathed his body to the General Hospital, Birmingham. In the hope that light would be thrown on the origin of headache, "the unmerciful scourge that has wrecked my happiness from my earliest recollections," followed a long line of posthumous benefactors to medical science. Perhaps the most remarkable of all was Jeremy Bentham, the philosopher, who directed that his skeleton should be clothed, provided with a specially molded wax head, and presented to the medical section of University college, London, where it may still be seen. Hospitals often receive queer bequests. Charing Cross hospital not long ago received a bag containing forty-eight farthings, a bust of Queen Victoria, and the return half of a railway ticket. Another famous hospital received the deeds of a freehold house, a pawn ticket for a valuable sporting trophy, a diamond ring, several prize rabbit skins, and twenty aspidochrons in pots.—London Times.

City of Quaint Dress

The city of Seoul, now called Keijo, the seat of the Korean government, is a place of quaint dress. White is the universal color of outer clothing, whether for men or for women. The women, who are short and fat, wear fantastic balloon cotton skirts. The men wear a "Mother Hubbard" robe, baggy trousers tied at the ankles, and a transparent "plug" hat, many sizes too small, tied under the chin. Long thin whiskers, great horn-rimmed goggles, hair put up in a queer top to signify manhood, and pipes with acorn tops or three feet long complete the picture. When in mourning for a male relative a man wears an immense straw hat shaped like a toadstool.

A Child of Boston

The little boy sat disconsolately on the curb and sobbed as though his heart was breaking. The kind old lady stopped and asked sweetly: "Is a litta boy cryin'?" Tum, tella nice wady wassa matter. "If you are inquiring as to the cause of my lachrymose condition," he answered, looking up at her pityingly. "It is because I have been unable to find any suitably intelligent playmates whose enigmatic constitutions are in harmony with my pathological tendencies and whose hereditary afflictions meet with the approval of my parental relations since we moved to this d-n place from Boston."—Carnegie Puppet.

Love Song of Old Race

The making of love songs is an ancient art. Before Pan blew upon his reedy pipes there were love songs. They were sung in the Garden of Eden before and after the serpent wiggled his way into that earthly paradise. Men wove their magic into the first crude language of the human race, when caves were used for dwelling places and the hunter went forth to the hills to strangle his prey with bare hands. Helen heard them sung to her within the walls of Troy. All through the countless ages of the world since time began there have been love songs.

The Coffee Cure

Coffee was once regarded as a cure-all. The first advertisement of the beverage was published in the Public Adviser of May 19, 1637, and announced that the proprietor of a shop in Bartholomew Lane, London, was stocking "a very wholesome and physical drink" called coffee, the virtue of which included helping the digestion, quickening the spirits, lightening the heart and proving "excellent good against eresores, coughs, colds, headaches, gout, dropsy, scurvy, king's evil," and a long string of other ailments.

Only One Way

Men glories in his physical strength, and well he may. But the greatest strength that a man may possess comes from being clean and straight, and right. Strong moral fiber is made by right living. There is no other way to gain this.—Grit.

Geologist Explains Causes of Landslides

In describing some troublesome landslides that have taken place in England, owing to wet weather, Mr. William Platt, author of "A Popular Geology," says: The causes are simple enough. Wherever the geological formation is that of alternate hard and soft rocks, and when this occurs in any sufficiently steep bank, hill or mountain, there will always be the risk of a landslide, especially after heavy rains, which soak into the softer layers and make them loose and slippery. Landslides may be divided into two classes—natural and artificial. The former occur in the wear and tear of nature. That picturesque mountain in the Derbyshire Pennines called Mam Tor is so liable to landslides that it has been nicknamed locally "The Shivering Mountain." Another celebrated instance is the landslide near Shanklin, Isle of Wight. At Merok, in Norway (Norangsdal) a huge landslide dammed up a river valley, causing the water to pile up and form a lake. The people who lived in the village in the valley managed to escape, but their red-roofed cottages can be seen today under the clear waters of the huge tarn thus formed.

Exactitude of Little Consequence in Map

An amusing story is told in Berlin by the publisher of geographical maps. A Mongolian prince recently visited Berlin to place an order for maps of his country. The publisher was glad to get the order, but told the prince that the latest maps he had were published before the war. "I must confess," said the publisher, "that I don't know the exact boundaries of your country at present. Haven't you some material that will tell me how to draw the boundary lines?" "No, I haven't," was the reply. "But it doesn't matter. Just you draw the boundaries as wide as possible, so that my people may see how large their country is."

Explaining Law of Motion

The first law of motion, one of the cardinal discoveries, which contributed to the fame of Sir Isaac Newton, is that a body continues to move at the same speed so long as no force is applied to retard or accelerate it. It was a surprise to his contemporaries and continues to be to any one who hears it for the first time. Experience leads us to suppose that the natural condition of a body is stationary; but Newton asserted that neither rest nor motion is more natural than the other. Bodies set in motion by human agency always come to rest before long, because friction and resistance of the air are always operating to retard them; but the earth is surrounded by empty space, so that there is no friction.

Chairs and Their Makers

It is probable that very early in American cabinet making rocking chairs were introduced. It is not unreasonable to attribute their origin to a date previous to the Revolution, but after 1750. Not until the Nineteenth century was well under way, however, did that type become common as an article of furniture. It is probable also that Windsor chairs were the first to be fitted with rockers. The Windsor chair itself was invented in England, and its comfort quickly made its appeal. The old chair makers knew how to adapt their furniture to the human anatomy, and the American inventor of the rocker added still more comfort.

Chinese Religion

Chinese religion, like Chinese art and literature, is quite indigenous, a natural expression of the Chinese philosophy of life. Indeed, the Chinese notion of religion is very slight. The thought of the entire population is permeated by a definite ethical code, but it is not fierce or persecutory. Religions are many, but reason is one. Chinese religion is more tolerant, more reasonable and less dogmatic than the religions of any other people. It is hardly more than an ethical code. In China there have never been religious wars.—Chi-Fung Liu, in Scribner's.

Ancient Golf Club

The Royal Blackheath Golf club of London is said to be the oldest. Records date back to 1787, and tradition carries the club back to the reign of James I, 1603-1625. The old Royal Blackheath course has been closed since it was no longer possible to keep it in playable condition. It was crossed and recrossed by roads and railways and surrounded by buildings. The course consisted of seven holes, a match consisting of three rounds of 31 holes.

Insect Civilization

That insects do almost everything known to mankind, whom they excel in skill, is the belief of a well-known nature student, who spoke before a meeting of the American Institute of Phenology. While the less developed species live under rocks or in the earth, and exist by hunting, trapping and fishing for prey, others colonize in large communities and keep herds, raise crops and use leaves for clothing and shelter. Many insects even build tiny streets and highways.

On Growing Old

We all have to grow old, so do your best not to worry about it. For over three thousand years people have been trying to discover the secret of perpetual youth, but they have never discovered it, and they never will. Old age is a gracious and a happy state when we accept it naturally. It is only when we struggle that it becomes a tragedy.

Half a Penny for a Page Ad. The cost to any regular advertiser to present a page ad to the 5000 readers of The Sentinel is one-half of a penny for each reader so reached. Three full page ads can be presented for the cost of postage alone upon a printed circular sent to 5000 persons. Reaching 5000 persons with a page advertisement at a cost of half a penny each is extremely moderate. The ordinary business man does not, however, regularly use page ads. A half page ad will reach the same number of readers at a cost of a quarter of a cent each. A quarter page ad can run once a week for a month at a cost of approximately half a penny for each reader reached with the four ads. A ten-inch ad, which is somewhere near the average used by a large number of advertisers, costs four one-hundredths of a penny for each reader reached. The Cottage Grove Sentinel.
