DEFERENCE TO WOMAN IS GOING.

Women, especially the younger ones, seem to take great pride in speaking of their new found independence. Some of their new ways must, of course, be commended even by the most old-fashioned of us of days that are gone, but we wonder whether women in gaining their new independence of these jazz days are not losing more than they are gaining.

In the olden days, men paid to woman, with her long hair, her long skirts and her quiet womanly ways a homage that is not today paid to the young woman with the mannish haircut, the knicker trousers and her I'm-just-as-good-as-you air.

When woman was satisfied to be considered of the weaker sex, when woman was contented to be dependent upon man, a certain deference was paid her that is not paid the young woman of today who proudly boasts that she is not of the weaker sex and takes pride in doing all the things that men do.

There was a certain charm about the young woman who was satisfied to invite a sweetheart into her home for a meal that is not to be found in the young woman whose "man" (it is no longer sweetheart or beau) must take his "woman" to a swell cafe and furnish her with cigarettes to be smoked afterward.

The change that has come over the younger generation is no better illustrated than by the fact that few girls resent being referred to as flappers and most of them like to be spoken of as someone's woman.

That young women, and older ones, too, can enjoy tennis, golf, swimming and outdoor sports is well; that they are in many ways more the equal of man is not to be objected to; that they do not have to slave as did their mothers and grandmothers gives them greater opportunities. It is not these things that take from them the homage that once was theirs.

There may be no good argument why woman should wear long tresses. There certainly is no argument for the street-sweeping skirt of yesterday. The bob within reason, the short skirt within reason, a certain independence need not take from woman the deference that once was shown her. It is not these things, but jazz and the mannish ways that have come with the freak bob, the too abbreviated skirt and independent ways that have put woman on the same plane with man; and man can not be expected to pay homage and show deference to his equals.

Why should man tip his hat to the woman whose head looks like his own. Why should he show any unusual courtesy to the woman who wears the pants that were his for centuries? Why should man give his seat in a train or streetcar to the woman who brags that she is his equal physically and otherwise?

Deference to the once weaker sex is going. Soon it will be gone. Are the things which woman has in their place sufficient recompense?

Short dresses have been with us, off and on, for years, and the effect is sinking home. No longer do young men point and leer when a girl boards a street car. No longer do the corner loungers strain their eyes when there is a bit of wind. A girl can sit in a street car with her legs crossed without attracting attention. It's a healthier state of mind. Let's hope it continues.—Astoria Budget.

In the words of the jazz kids, how do you get that way?

Theater News

Theaters in this territory, in company with 8,000 theaters in the United States, will observe the eighth annual Paramount week September 6 to 13. Paramount pictures will be shown exclusively during the week in the theaters joining in this movement.

Newspapers are being used almost exclusively by the Famous Players-Lasky corporation to advertise Paramount week, the advance story of the event being carried in 3,500 newspapers in the country. These include both daily and weekly papers and the sum spent is one of the largest ever expended in that manner in a single day.

Paramount week has come to have considerable importance in the motion picture industry and this year will mark the commencement of a season of great Paramount pictures. A strong bid for popularity was made by the company when it released such pictures as "The Covered Wagon," "Thundering Herd," "The Ten Commandments," "Panhandle," "Monsieur Beaucaire," "Merton of the Movies," "North of 36," "Peter Pan," and others.

Pictures for early release which are expected to keep the Paramount name before theatergoers include "That Royle Girl," directed by D. W. Griffith; Harold Lloyd comedies; Douglas MacLean comedies; two James Cruze productions, "A Boggar on Horseback," and "The Pony Express." Gloria Swanson will be seen in "The Coast of Folly" and "Stage Struck"; Thomas Meighan in "The Man Who Found Himself" and one now being made in Ireland. Pola Negri will repeat her success of last year with a new Barrie picture, "A Kiss for Cinderella." Joseph Conrad's masterpiece, "Lord Jim," will be filmed with Percy Marmont in the title role.

These are only a few of Paramount's "Greater Forty," to be released during the coming season following Paramount week.

up. She sank where she now lies and has not been disturbed for half a century.

"Did boats ever run up the river to Roseburg?"

"Only one boat ever made the trip. Captain Hawn was her master. That was in 1868. After the trip the owners got into a quarrel and the boat was taken away. Later a company was organized to operate a fleet up the river. One boat attempted to carry a load of lumber, but it failed to get over Sawyer rapids. A donkey engine had been placed on the boat. It was planned to tie ahead and have the donkey pull the boat through the rapids, but no place could be found to hitch a line, and the trip was never completed and no more were attempted. Captain Hawn was master of the only boat to make the trip up the river from here."

In an old day book in the possession of Mr. Hedin appears, among other interesting entries, a charge of 50 cents for a gallon of whiskey. If the stores there could now sell the stuff at the old price, there is little doubt that Scottsburg would experience a quick return to its pioneer splendor and glory.

Reedsport, at the mouth of the Umpqua on Winchester bay, the western terminus of the proposed scenic highway to tidewater, is also interested in the development of its harbor. No ocean boats have used it for two years, at which time the "Admiral Nickelson" and "Andover" hung up on the reefs or mud banks and insurance companies withdrew protection from all boats that went over the bar into Reedsport harbor. Boosters believe that eventually the federal government will build jetties to squeeze the waters of the Umpqua into a smaller channel and in that manner provide a sufficient depth over the bar. This method has proved successful on the Columbia.

The object of the picnic held recently was to focus public attention upon the proposed highway, 52 miles in length and the shortest possible route from Pacific highway to the coast; to stress its importance as a commercial and scenic route and as a possible military road leading to the coast from the Willamette and Umpqua valleys and to coordinate the efforts of Cottage Grove, Drain, Elkton, Scottsburg and Reedsport in asking its improvement from federal funds. While Cottage Grove is not on the proposed highway, it is the nearest city of size and the natural trading point for residents of the section.

Joseph Lyons, of Reedsport, who was the principal speaker at the picnic, declared that already $600,000 had been spent on the road, some of it federal money, and about $310,000 Douglas county bond money.

SOME ROOMS UNDESIRABLE. Pen Often Crowded and One Must Be Noisy to Get Best Food. Oregon City, Or., Aug. 23.—(To the Editor.)—John Tomseth of Cottage Grove writes you asking for advice relative to passing his declining years in the big house at Salem without going to the trouble of killing someone. If Mr. Tomseth would like to get some real inside information from an ex-star boarder, I will disillusion the old gentleman about some of the features in connection with the institution about which he seems to have gained the wrong impression. There are pleasant features and unpleasant ones to be considered by anyone who contemplates spending the evening shadows in the company of men who have chosen this retreat as a surcease from the cares and strifes of a cold and merciless outside world. It may be granted that the conveniences and simple pleasures outbalance the slight restrictions placed upon the guests, yet and withal there is much to be considered before one should make a final decision upon such an important matter. There are times when the house is crowded almost to inconvenience. With the exception of that wing of the institution which possesses a southern exposure the rooms are not what one would desire. Chicken dinners and ice cream are not served as regularly as Mr.
