English Writer Tells "Tall" Fish Stories

The winter garden of the Savoy hotel, London, was the scene of a double tragedy a few weeks ago. For many years two goldfish, named Ernest and Eva, made their home in the fountain there. Guests from all parts of the world admired them, for the fish were famous on account of their tricks.

As soon as a cork was put in the water, Ernest would leap over it in a flash of gold, and sometimes would turn a somersault in the air. One day, however, a thoughtless guest flicked some cigar ash into the fountain, and the fish were poisoned.

Another notable golfish died recently. His name was Peter, and for fourteen years he lived in the garden fountain of St. Andrew-by-the-Wardrobe, London.

Legends of long-lived fish are numerous. One of the most interesting concerns the "Holy Trout of Kilgeever." This fish lived for many years in a well in the west of Ireland. Tradition says that, when French troops landed there more than a century ago, they ran short of food, and certain soldiers decided to have the trout fried for dinner. When they put him on the pan, the trout disappeared up the chimney and found his way back to the well, where he lived for many years.—London Tit-Bits.

Tramp's Quiet Remark Made Big Impression

I remember once two or three of us children had climbed up a high chestnut tree near the gate of our home (reminisces Sir William Orpen in "Stories of Old Ireland and Myself"). A broken-down old tramp was passing painfully along the road, but he stopped when he heard our laughter, and at last detected where we were above him.

"Ah, children," said he, "I would like to be up there with you!"

We laughed still more at the idea of this old man climbing a tree. And one of us said:

"What on earth, old man, do you want to come up here for?"

To which he replid:

"Wouldn't I be nearer to heaven?"

And away he moved on his weary tramp of the roads. But we were very quiet for a bit after what he said.

Testing Gold

To test gold, dig a point of a knife into it, and if it powders it is not gold. Gold is richly yellow, but to tell it from pyrites when in very minute flecks, turn it so that the light catches it from various directions. Gold will not alter in shade, but pyrites does. A drop of nitric acid will cause a fuming on pyrites, but does not affect gold.

You must pan creek sands and gravel to find gold. It may be near the surface, but generally the heaviest deposits of placer gold are on and close to bed rock, which may be a few feet or many feet deep. Gold placers are best found in a big bend in a creek, which allows it to be deposited, or on the upper side of a reef or ledge crossing the stream. Sometimes it is a dry deposit, up where the stream formerly flowed, and is called a "bench" placer.—Victor Shaw, in Adventure Magazine.

Mercury

Mercury is a metallic element existing in a liquid form except when exposed to a very low temperature. It is commonly called quicksilver. It is a metallic element, just as iron or gold is an element, that is, it cannot be subdivided into anything else; but there are many compounds of mercury, that is, mercury in chemical combination with other things such as compounds of mercury and oxygen, mercury and nitrogen, etc. A large part of the world's supply of mercury is obtained in California where ores are found containing mercury in combination with other matter, separated by various chemical processes. Gold dust readily unites with mercury forming an amalgam. The mercury is afterwards removed by distillation.

Famous English Regiment

The name "Ironsides" was given to a famous regiment of one thousand horse that served under Oliver Cromwell, in allusion to the iron courage displayed by it at the battle of Marston Moor, 1644. Members of the "Ironsides" were chiefly recruited from the eastern counties of England. They were extremely religious, almost to a man, and enjoyed the proud distinction of never having been defeated in battle. Cromwell said of them in a speech, the year before his death, "Truly they were never beaten, but whenever they were engaged against the enemy they beat continually."—Kansas City Star.

Of Greatest Interest

Parson—You love to go to Sunday school, don't you Robert?

Bobby—Yes, sir.

Parson—What do you expect to learn today?

Bobby—The date of the picnic.

On Deck

"You don't look so well, old man. When we sailed you were full of your trip."

"The motion of the boat took a lot of that out of me."

A Determined Man

"I told my wife that if she bobbed her hair I would leave her."

"But she bobbed it; and you're still living with her?"

"You bet I am. I'll show her she can't bluff me."

Had the Right Idea

Grey—Having your car repainted to match your wife's gowns, eh? Isn't it rather expensive?

White—It's cheaper than buying a gown to match the car.

Junior Queener Dies.

Junior Thomas Queener, month-old soon of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Queener, of Saginaw, died Monday night in a Eugene hospital. Funeral services were conducted this morning at 10 o'clock in the Catholic church by Pastor Curley, of Eugene. Interment was in the A. F. & A. M.-I. O. O. F. cemetery.

Co. D Has Inspection.

Company D, 186th infantry, held its regular quarterly muster Tuesday night in the armory. Captain Diaz, instructor for the Oregon national guard, was inspecting officer. Sergeant Vaughn, also an instructor in the O. N. G. assisted in the inspection.

Free Methodist Conference.

The quarterly meeting of the Free Methodists will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday in the Blue Mountain church. Sessions will open at 8 o'clock tomorrow and Saturday and will be held at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sunday.

J. Marra (Pacific States Electric company, Oakland, Calif.,) had a friend who once went to an exhibition of curiosities in London where they displayed the skull of Oliver Cromwell.

"But this cannot be the skull of the great Protector," his friend said to the exhibitor, "for th's is a very small skull and Oliver Cromwell was noted for his very large head."

"Oh," said the exhibitor, "but this was his skull when he was a very small boy."

Auto Salesman—"Now I'll throw in the clutch."
