Heraldry at Bottom of Ophelia's Remark

Many who have seen the tragedy, "Hamlet," and heard Ophelia say to the queen, Hamlet's mother, "You may wear rue with a difference," must have been mystified as to her meaning, although the poignancy of the mad act causes the mind to pass it by as one of Shakespeare's inexplicable problems. Yet it is not inexplicable. In heraldry "differences," or "marks of cadency," indicate the various branches of a family. During the lifetime of his father, the eldest son bears a label, the second a crescent, the third a mullet, the fourth a martlet, the fifth an annulet, the sixth a fleur de lis, the seventh a rose, the eighth a cross moline, the ninth a double quatre foil.

Ophelia says both she and the queen are to wear rue, herself as the affianced bride of the eldest son of the king, but the queen with a "difference," indicative of the fact that, although she was Hamlet's mother, her status was that of his present husband, Claudius, the cadet branch of the family.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Evil Spirit of Sea Feared by Sailors

Punta Flechas, a promontory on the northern coast of Palawan, Philippines, has become a well-known landmark to Yankee skipper's voyaging to minor ports of the Philippines to pick up cargoes of sugar, coconuts dried into copra to be shipped to vegetal oil mills, and Manila hemp and other fibers for the cordage industry. An interesting superstition of Filipino sailors attaches to the name Punta Flechas, which means in English, Arrow point. The granite cliff figures in Philippine mythology as the dread abode of an ogre of the sea who could conjure winds and typhoons to trouble the water of Dumaran channel and wreck navies of those who refused to pay him homage. He demanded process in his worshippers, and the way to appease his wrath was to sail close under the cliff and launch arrows into it. Shots falling short were an evil omen—if they are not yet.

Fled From Native Land

The name "emigres" is given to those persons who leave France at the time of the revolution. The royal princes fled in 1789, in consequence of the fall of the Bastille, and were followed, after the adoption of the constitution of 1791, by all those who felt aggrieved by the extinction of their privileges. The greater number of these refugees returned in 1802, after the peace of Amiens, owing to an amnesty grant by Napoleon Bonaparte, while first consul. Many, however, remained abroad until after the fall of Napoleon. According to the charter of 1814, the emigres were unable to recover their estates or their privileges. In 1825, however, a compensation of 30,000,000 francs yearly was granted those emigres who had lost their landed estates. This grant was annulled after the July revolution of 1830.—Kansas City Star.

Auctioneer's Find

Some time ago a man sent a parcel of books to a London saleroom. They proved mostly of little value, but among them the auctioneer discovered a rare leather-bound volume containing specimens of Caxton's press. The contents comprised a fragment of the "Royal Book," a perfect copy of which is worth over $10,000, nearly all "The Book of Good Manners," and about half of "The Doctrinal of Sapience," a complete copy of which has realized $3,000 at auction. The only perfect copy known to collectors outside the Bodleian library at Oxford, of the "Songs and Sonnets" by Henry Howard, earl of Surrey, published in 1587, was found in the old oak walnut of a bakery at Chatham. How long it had lain there is a mystery.

Term Used by Masons

The name "Cyclopean masonry" is given to wall constructed of large, irregular, but closely fitting stones, unheven and uncemented, specimens of which may still be seen at Mycenaee and Tiryns and other parts of Greece, and also in Italy. These walls were probably built by the Pelasgians, a race anterior to the Greeks and Romans, about 1000 B. C.; but later generations, struck by their vast proportions, ascribed their construction to the fabulous race of the Cyclopes, whence their name. Examples of Cyclopean masonry exist also in Sicily, Ireland, Peru and Africa.—Exchange.

London's Big Reservoir

As a means of increasing the fresh water supply for the city, London built the world's largest artificial reservoir. It is capable of holding about 7,000,000,000 gallons of water. It has a surface of more than 700 acres, large as a section of land. It is about one and a quarter miles in diameter, and is a seven-sided polygon in shape. Its location is north of the Thames between Staines and Shepperton.

But Robert Will Learn

Little Robert, age three, and his mother were visiting his aunt. His mother was the fortunate possessor of an abundance of hair, but the aunt was not so fortunate. One evening Robert was in his aunt's room when she took her hair down (or rather off) for the night, and greatly excited he ran and called: "Oh, mama, come quick. Auntie's hair has all broken off."

No Apology Needed

Housewife—I should think you would be ashamed to beg in this neighborhood.
Tramp—Don't apologize for it, ma'am. It's a poor neighborhood, but I've seen worse.—Good Hardware Magazine.

Rural England in 1825 Had Little Oer China

The Chinese minister of communication sent from Peking a long cablegram of poetic prose felicitating the managers of the Darlington railway exhibition in England on their centennial of George Stephenson's "Locomotion No. 7."

Unless the railway track laid over the graves of ancestors in an inland province, the spectacle of the puffing monster, once regarded as first cousin to the earth-dragon, would excite far less confusion in the celestial republic today than it did among the honest English yokels of Stephenson's era.

Then, according to contemporary report, "in many bosoms the arrival caused the greatest consternation. They fled in subject terror, many hiding themselves in the church, others seeking consolation in the bottle, while some of the more courageous climbed into trees and at a safe distance watched it pass."

Reading that account one is inclined to believe that Europe in 1825 was not many leagues in advance of the cycle of Cathay, remarks the Philadelphia Ledger.

Old English Dog Law Had Sound Reasoning

There was a great fear of dogs among the people of England when Edward I was reigning, in which time was established the most extraordinary law affecting dogs, according to a writer in the Ohio State Journal.

Only those people living a considerable distance from the large forests in that country were permitted to own and keep dogs, particularly large dogs, the lawmakers, with great wisdom, reasoning that a large dog near the forest, where there was much wild game, would join with other large dogs and follow the call of the wild.

A great pack of wild dogs would be developed, game would be destroyed and grave danger developed for human life. So the law provided a dog-gauge, an opening of prescribed size, and only such dogs as could squeeze their way through the legal measuring gauge were permitted to be kept at a home within ten miles of the forests. And the law never has been repealed, but it has not been used for generations.

Fear Was a Friend

A few weeks before his death Lord Leverhulme, in his presidential address to the Institute of Certified Grocers at Scarborough, said that the greatest help to any of them was fear, and that fear had been his best friend. His first recollection was fear. He had fear of continuing a clerk at his father's business, and that fear persuaded his father to put him on the road as a commercial traveler at the age of nineteen. He married at the age of twenty-two, and then fear came as to whether the profits would keep a wife.

Later fear drove him into soap. His soap, widely advertised, was sold as a company in 1894. In the words of one of his numerous obituaries: "The years that followed marked the growth of a business ideal that was almost epic in its triumphs and ramifications."—Spectator, London.

"System" Fell Down

Johnson prides himself on having a system for betting on the races that can't be beat. He frequently makes queer bets and sometimes that god of chance that favors those who rush in where angels are conspicuous by their absence smiles upon him. But the other day he tried one and failed.

There was a four-horse race and Johnson conceived the brilliant idea of betting on each of the four horses to win. Perhaps he didn't stop to think that it would take a 4 to 1 shot winner for him to break even. In any event, at the last moment there was an added starter—and the added starter won.

Johnson doesn't think so much of his system.

Rare Exhibits of Pearls

In a shop in Regent street, London, is being shown a remarkable collection of pearls gathered from fisheries all over the world. There are white Austrian pearls with their silver sheen very beautiful, but cold in color, that can be worn triumphantly by the pale blonde. The warm magnois-lined pearls from Ceylon and the golden and brown pearls found in the depths of the Red sea are ideal for darker women, as are the rare black pearls found only in the Gulf of Mexico by pearl fishers searching for black mother of pearl.

The Hegira

The Mohammedan calendar, by which time is reckoned in Turkey and all lands adhering to the religion of Islam dates from the hegira or flight of their prophet from Mecca, July 12, 622. The Mohammedan calendar is divided into 12 months; the first month has 30 days, the second 29 and so on through the calendar, except that the eleventh and twelfth months both have 30 days respectively.

A Big One

Little Mary's father is a teacher and keeps pretty close tabs on her school work.

Her arithmetic gives him more concern than anything else. At lunch time on the day when she had her final examination in arithmetic he asked her what mark she got.

To which she mournfully replied: "The biggest nought I ever saw."

A Treat

She—You bet.
He—Just drop these beans in water and watch them.
