FARMER COMES BACK.

Relative purchasing power of agricultural products in relation to all commodities has reached 100 per cent in Oregon for the first time since the agricultural depression, according to Paul V. Maria, director of extension service at Oregon Agricultural college, who made that statement in addressing a recent session of agricultural and extension agents.

Secretary Jardine, upon his recent return to Washington from a trip through the northwest and other sections of the United States, reported that the farmer was coming back and that he was inclined to resent too much paternalistic advice.

There is no person more independent of the world than the farmer when his products bring a living price and seldom in the history of the country, if ever before, has he undergone such a long period of depression as that from which he is now recovering. Of course it will take time for him to recoup his losses, but he will be heartened greatly by the fact that he can begin to climb out of the red instead of sinking further in.

The farmer was inclined to feel that the hand of the world was against him. This was not natural. That is always the case with the fellow who is down, and it certainly always appears that way. The farmer must be encouraged by the fact that all are now engaged in predicting his early recovery and congratulating him.

Every man gets to the front soon or late, even though he may have to die in order to get to lead the procession.

If it were not for a man's vacation, what a lot of things around the house would never get done.

The ten commandments are the only rules to which there are no exceptions.

Schools Are Planned.
A series of five-day schools will be conducted in various parts of Lane county in January, it has been announced by O. S. Fletcher, county agent. Mr. Fletcher has arranged with Oregon Agricultural college instructors to speak at these meetings. Programs will be arranged to suit the needs of the communities in which the schools will be held, dairy specialists speaking in dairy centers and horticultural specialists appearing in fruit districts.

Directory Is Delayed.
The directory of Lane county schools, issued each year from the office of E. J. Moore, county school superintendent, will be ready in the near future, it has been announced. Preparation of the directory has been delayed due to the large number of new school teachers to be listed. There are now 450 teachers employed in the county. The directory will contain, in addition to the list of teachers, other information on the 200 districts in Lane county.

Blasting to Be Shown.
Four or five demonstrations of the use of pyratol as a blasting powder will be given in Lane county this fall by O. S. Fletcher, county agent. The first will be held November 9. Places of the demonstrations will be announced later. The fifth carload of the explosive, containing 25,000 pounds, was received last week. A part of this was ordered for the county court and the remainder will be distributed among farmers.

Miss Norton to Leave.
Miss Grace Norton, executive secretary of the Lane county chapter of the Red Cross for three years, will leave Eugene October 22 for Nobe, Ill. Miss Norton resigned several months ago but agreed to remain on duty until the close of the regional conference in session last week in Eugene. Her successor has not been named.

Nine Sentenced to Prison.
Nine men have been sentenced to the state penitentiary from Lane county in the last two weeks. Three of these were taken to Salem Friday, bringing the total number of Lane inmates in the institution up to 42 and setting a lead over all other counties in the state. Several cases remain to be disposed of.

Circuit Court Opens.
The docket prepared for circuit court, which opened this morning, contains five criminal cases and seven civil suits so far. A large number of cases are pending and several important cases are expected to come before Judge Skipworth. A panel of 31 veniremen was called for service at 10 o'clock.

Tax Returns Filed.
Fifty Lane county school districts have already filed returns on special tax levies to be raised this year in their respective districts. These returns are required to be completed and filed before December 1. A total of 171 school districts voted special levies for school work last year.

upon the probability that he soon will be on easy street. Of course the hand of the world is not against the farmer. It could not be, for that hand was suffering with the farmer. There is never the best of times except when the producer is enjoying prosperity. If for no other than selfish reasons, all wish the farmer well. What made the farmer feel that way probably was that few except politicians seeking his vote paid much attention to his condition. All seemed busy with their own affairs and had little time to give in offering help and encouragement to the tiller of the soil.

Now that the tiller of the soil is on the way to prosperity, he will find all free to tell what they were ready to do. Well, anyway, whether or not we did what we should have done in the matter, all are pleased with the upward trend of the products of the farm, with their nearer approach to being able to buy 100 per cent of other products, for that will make the wheels of business go round and that means prosperity for all.

We haven't kicked much about the upward trend of the prices of other products. Let us not kick when we have to pay for what the farmer has to sell. It is time that he had his inning.

What a difference there is between the sweet, plaintive cry of your own baby and the horrible upron of your neighbor's kid.

Lane county has more school districts than any other county, E. J. Moore, county school superintendent, stated last week. Schools of the county now have 450 teachers, he said. This year 25 were added to care for increasing enrollment.

Self-Sacrifice of Son Met Deserved Reward

Wonderful in surgical anatomy, says a writer in the Glasgow Evening Citizen, was the case of a Scottish woman who sustained shocking injuries in a runaway accident. Her skull and both legs were fractured, and her left arm and one side of her face badly lacerated. Her son, a young physician, abandoned his practice and set himself to endeavor to restore his mother's life. Every one else had given up her case as hopeless. Day and night he devoted his whole time to her, and so inspired not only his nurses, but the poor sufferer herself, that she survived and began slowly to mend.

But the mutilation of the face caused terrible disfigurement. The son thereupon insisted upon the attendant physicians removing skin grafts from his own body to graft upon the scars. One by one, no fewer than forty pieces of skin were cut from his body and grafted upon his mother's face and arm. In the end the woman not only recovered from injuries which would have killed ninety-nine out of a hundred, but also showed very slight disfigurement.

In this case, however, filial love was the motive for the sacrifice, and perhaps similar disinterested motives have operated at least as powerfully in cases of this kind as the hope of monetary gain.

"Name to Conjure With" Once Had Real Meaning

"A name to conjure with" is a phrase more used and understood as conjuring was not always the term for stage or parlor tricks of the present day. Originally conjuring stood for the art of the magician—the conjurer of the Dark Ages being really the same personage as the wizard. His conjuring really meant a very solemn compact or agreement, the word itself being taken from the Latin for an oath. Part of his ritual consisted in the then popular belief that he could summon up Satan or some other spirit by the saying of some "word of power" such as a word being generally mysterious-sounding like "abracadabra." Occasionally the name of some departed great one, such as Solomon, was used. This name would then be known as sufficiently mighty to "conjure with," spirits being it being bound to obey. Today, no longer believe in magic, and the magician of mystery and dread has turned into the harmless gentleman who produces rabbits from his hat at children's parties; but the old phrase still remains and we refer to this and that great man as having "a name to conjure with."

Fun With Writers

Headlight—What you have after overlooking two scenarios discuss your recently published story.
Coincidence—What you introduce in your plot to make the reader think you took the rabbit out of the hat.
Writer's Cramp—A term applied to the condition of writers between checks.
Collaboration—An agreement between authors under which one does the work and the other undoes it.
Honorarium—What the writer receives when the editor is ashamed to call it a payment.
End—What the woman reader turns forward to, to see if she wants to turn back and read on; the place where the make-up man achieves a "fill" by throwing away the last paragraph; the point just before which your neighbor drops in to spend an hour borrowing the screw driver.—Writers' Monthly.

Real Grief

Jerry had been worshipping Ethel for months, but had never told her. He had come often and stayed late—very late—and she could only sigh and hope. He was going away the next day on a holiday, and he thought the last night was the time to spring the momentous question. He kept it to himself, however, until the last thing. It was 11:30 by the clock.

"Miss Ethel," he said tremulously, "I am going away tomorrow."
"Are you?" she said with the thoughtfulness of girlhood.
"Yes," he replied, "Are you sorry?"
"Yes, very sorry," she murmured as she glanced at the clock. "I thought you might go away this evening."

Ancient Egyptian Bread

The ancient Egyptians carried the art of baking to high perfection, although the Greek historian remarks of them, "dough they kneaded with their feet, but clay with their hands." The bread of the majority of the people was made of barley, but white bread made from wheat was used by the rich. The form of the bread is revealed by ancient monuments. A common shape was a small round loaf, something like a muffin of today. Other loaves were elongated rolls, and curiously enough were sprinkled on the top with seeds like the modern Vienna bread.

The English of It

This is probably why the English language is so hard for foreigners to learn.
"I've lost the links," said the soiled shirt.
"I've lost the links," said the golfer, as he wandered aimlessly through the woods.
"I've lost the lynx," said the hunter, as he saw tracks around his trap.

Later, you'll notice, Roger, Abraham made a sacrifice, and the prodigal a home run.—Boston Transcript.

Trade Wind Nothing to Do With Commerce

The best known wind in the world is the trade wind. It is commonly assumed that the word is connected with trade or commerce, because in the old sailing days mariners used to seek this wind that it might blow them steadily in the right direction, be dependable, and not subject to variation or calm. This is a common error.

In Anglo-Saxon it was the trade wind, a wind with a specific trend, trend or direction.

The trade wind, then, is one of uniform track. In the northern hemisphere these winds blow from the northeast, and in the southern hemisphere from the southeast, about thirty degrees on each side of the equator. In some places they blow six months in one direction and six in the opposite.

The mistral is another famous wind. It is a violent northwest wind blowing down the Gulf of Lyons and felt particularly in the neighborhood of Marseilles. The mistral is a hot, suffocating wind that blows in northern Africa and Arabia. The sirocco blows from north Africa over Italy.

Bees Not Permitted to Roam at Large

In the great plum-growing districts of northern California bees are being caged, not to insure pollination of the blossoms with pollen only from other trees of equal quality, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Much loss has been occasioned to growers in the past due to cross-fertilization of their pure-sved plums with pollen from wild species and inferior varieties of the domestic fruit, resulting in crops of poorer grade and smaller size. A framework covered with strong mosquito net is built around each tree and a hive of bees is installed in the enclosure when the blossoms begin to appear. Freshly cut flowers from plum trees of equally good grade with the one caged are supplied to the insects each day and from these blossoms the little workers carry the pollen to their home tree. Cages have also been equipped with wheels so that an entire orchard can be covered with the inclosures in a short time.

Romance of Flowers

A great many of the flowers so well beloved bear names taken from human beings and are recorded in classic legends. Take, for instance, the hyacinth and narcissus. "Hyacinthus" was beloved by Zephyrus, but returned the affection so coldly that the latter, in anger, threw the quail (flung by Apollo) so that it hit Hyacinthus on the head, causing his death. In his grief Apollo changed the youth's blood into the flower. Narcissus, according to one legend, fell in love with his own fair image as he saw it reflected in water, mistaking it for the nymph of the fountain. He pined away and died of unrequited love. The flower bloomed from the place where he languished. Crocus is the Greek "krokos," saffron, to which family it belongs. Saffron is made from the dried stigma of the purple crocus. The jonquill gets its name from the Latin word for a "rush," which has similar leaves and flowers.—The Flower Grower.

Gold Mine Rediscovered

A gold mine was recently discovered in Mexico by the presence of cockroaches. The mine was known to the Spaniards in the days of Cortes, who, on account of the number of cockroaches near the entrance, dubbed it Cucaracha, which being interpreted, is the cockroach. It yielded a steady supply of gold until 1812, and during that troubled year it was sealed up and its site forgotten, though its story was remembered. A young prospector, finding a rock containing what these insects, recalled the story, followed their trail, and found the mine, which now, after a century of idleness, is again being worked.—Family Herald.

No Pedigree

A rather mussy little urchin wandered up on the porch and began to play with Donald Smith, whose mother is quite fastidious as to playmates for her small son.

"Where's he from?" mother asked Donald in an aside and not getting a satisfactory explanation, she called Donald into the house, which disgusted him entirely.

"Now, mother," he argued, "can't just this one boy play with me without being from anywhere?"

Tree Yields Rich Milk

A tree in the West Indies, known to the natives as the hyabya, yields from its bark and pith a juice richer and thicker than cow's milk. The people who live where the hyabya grows use its juice as we do milk. The tree when full grown is almost 40 feet high and 18 inches in circumference.

The Singhalese have a tree, the kirghum, which yields a milky fluid, while in the forests of Para grows the massenodendron, another species of milk tree.—Detroit News.

White Gold

This metal is an alloy of gold, nickel and palladium, a rare metal of the platinum group. Pure gold is 24 carats fine. The fine gold most seen is 18 carats—18 parts of gold and six of palladium and nickel. There are various formulas, in which the proportions of the latter metals differ. Green gold is similarly alloyed with silver, red with copper, and blue and gray with iron.

Beauty Is "Beast of Horror."
The glorious color of burnished red on the hillside is a cause of admiration to the tourist passing through in his car merely looking for the scenery. The same wonderful coloring, which in the sunset glow outrivals all the surrounding beauties of nature, is a source of torment to the local agriculturalist. What appears at a distance to be beauty is beast of horror, the Russian thistle, that is taking the hillside, roadside and vacant tract of land where there is the least moisture to encourage the sprouting of the seed.—Madras Pioneer.
