Youth Evidently Had Read and Remembered

The following anecdote, which is told about the English poet and essayist, Matthew Arnold, and his youthful son, shows that the mental quickness that manifested itself first in old Thomas Arnold, the headmaster of Rugby, and then Matthew, the son, was transmitted unimpaired to the third generation.

Matthew Arnold's son once heard someone say that the moon was made of green cheese. Immediately he said: "I don't believe the moon is made of green cheese." When his father asked why he did not believe so, the boy could only repeat: "I don't know why, but I don't believe it."

Matthew Arnold told him he should not give opinions without having reasons for them. Young Arnold was chagrined and went away squelched—for the time being.

The next morning after greeting his father, he said: "Now I know why the moon is not made of green cheese. I found my reason in Genesis."

"You have the advantage of me, then, conceded his father. "I didn't know the subject was mentioned in the Bible."

"Yes, it is," replied the boy. "It tells about the creation, and the moon was made before there were any cows!"—Youth's Companion.

Electricity the Cause of Auroral Displays

Aurora Borealis, Northern Lights or Streamers, Aurora Polaris and Australis, and Polar Light are the different names given to an electrical meteor, appearing most frequently in high latitudes in the form of luminous clouds, arches and rays, the latter sometimes meeting at a point near the zenith, forming what is called a "boreol crown."

The generally accepted theory is that the aurora is due to the ascent of positive electricity from the intertropical water surfaces, which flow toward the poles. In the polar regions it descends toward the earth and comes in contact with the terrestrial negative electricity, which results in luminous discharges of great brilliancy. Intimate relations exist between sun spots, magnetic storms and auroras, the appearance of a large spot on the solar disk being almost invariably accompanied by a magnetic storm in all parts of the globe. During magnetic storms auroral displays usually take place, but not all auroras are coincident with magnetic disturbances.

Cleaning Ornaments

Bronze and gilt ornaments can be cleaned only by brushing carefully with fine quality, small paint brushes. When too dull and shabby they must be done over by a professional. When the cheaper quality of gilt frames get shabby, take enough flour of sulphur to give a golden tinge to a pint and a half of water and add four bruised onions. Boil 20 minutes, then strain and cool. Wipe the dust from the frame, and with a small, soft brush paint it over with the liquid, then set aside to dry. When dry it will look almost like new. The more expensive gilt frames must be re-gilded by a professional when very shabby, though they may be touched up one or more times with this liquid, which will help their appearance.

Dental Hygiene

Among the occupations which have arisen in connection with the development of preventive medicine and public health work, that of the dental hygienist, oral hygienist, or dental nurse, as it has been variously called, is perhaps the most recent. Dental disease is the most common of all human ailments, and seems likely to remain so for some time to come. The public school offers an especially fine field of work for both prophylactic and educational work, and the dental hygienist is employed by the department of education in a considerable number of cities, towns and rural districts. Dental hygienists are well paid, considering the time spent in training. The salaries range from $80 to $200 a month.

Indians and Game Laws

Indians cannot as a rule kill game of a season except as specified in a special treaty governing the particular tribe to which an individual belongs. There are between 20 and 30 of these treaties drawn up for the various tribes in this country. Under no circumstances, however, is an Indian permitted to violate the federal migratory bird treaty, and any provision made in a special treaty is revoked by the federal act. Indians, however, are allowed the privileges of fishing.

Traunt's Good Excuse

Schoolboys are extremely practical in these days. The headmaster of a school in an English district recently received a note apologizing for a boy's absence from school because he was repairing his boots. The master was naturally interested, and upon inspection was astonished at the skillful way in which this lad of thirteen had soled and heeled and patched the boots he was wearing. Handwork is not taught in vain apparently.

No Relief to Him

"When you are angry," said the man of gentle instincts, "stop and count a hundred." "A hundred!" echoed Mr. Sirus Barker. "If I could stop at a hundred in counting up my wife's milliner's bills I wouldn't be angry."

One Meal

"Do buy me a new evening dress, darling!" "Why, what's happened to that nice little green one?" "Oh! A moth's eaten it."—Printer's Pie.

Wrestling Bouts to Start

Robin Reed, hailed as a coming title winner, will also be seen in the matches. The first card will be put on in the Heilig theater either December 7 or 9, it was announced.

Pastor Is Host to Men

Pastor Duncan P. Cameron was host to 40 men at a supper served Friday evening in the basement of the Presbyterian church by the missionary society of the church. Bruce J. Giffen, Presbyterian student pastor at the University of Oregon, told of his work at the university and of the call of the church to broader fields.

Legion Plans Show

The "Days of '49" annual show of the American Legion will be put on in the new garage building being erected on north Ninth street some time about the middle of December. This decision was reached Monday night at the meeting of the post. Nomination of officers was held and election will be held December 7.

Animal to Be Envied

Is the Hippopotamus

An unnamed explorer is quoted in the Berliner Tageblatt as speculating on the relative happiness of men and hippopotamuses. Other animals, it appears, have their troubles.

"Many a believer in the transmigration of souls might like to be a magnificent bird of paradise fluttering from twig to twig in the tropic heavens when he returns to earth," he says. "But oh, how soon he would find himself in somebody's roaster or adorning the Sunday-go-to-meeting hat of some fat provincial lady!"

"The great wild beasts, though they live in glorious freedom, suffer. Lions, leopards, tigers, elephants, eagles, have a hard life and a constant search for food, and many of them are destined for the lead of the human—or inhuman—hunter's rifle. Let us say nothing of the slavery of domestic animals, which are eaten in return for their services to men.

"There is only one free and fortunate beast, whom man leaves in peace because his skin is useless, his flesh repulsive, and hunting him dangerous. That is the hippo. He can spend his life in philosophic calm, live it out to the end, and grow to be a couple of centuries old—so at least learned men say."—Living Age.

Early Hospitals Were Refuges for Pilgrims

The word hospital is from the Latin, "hospes," a guest. From the same source come host, one who entertains; hospitality, the entertainment given; and hospitalier, the keeper of the house. The hospital of the Middle Ages was originally an inn or house of entertainment for pilgrims. In process of time these places of entertainment were resorted to by the sick and infirm only, and the house of entertainment became an asylum for the sick and wounded.

The name hospitaliers was first applied to those whose duty it was to provide "hospitium," lodging and entertainment for pilgrims. The most noted institution of the kind during the Middle Ages was at Jerusalem, which gave its name to an order called the Knights Hospitaliers. This order was also called Knights of St. John at Jerusalem. Afterward they were styled the Knights of Rhodes and then Knights of Malta, because the islands of Rhodes and Malta were conferred upon them by different monarchs.

Famous English Library

The Bodleian library is the public library of the University of Oxford, England. Its name derives from Sir Thomas Bodley, who restored it in 1598. Among other things he gave to the library a large and valuable collection of books purchased on the continent. The library occupies the site of the old University library, which was despoiled of its contents during the reign of Edward VI. By copyright law, a copy of every volume published in the United Kingdom is given to the library, which has from time to time been enriched by valuable collections of books and manuscripts. In the matter of rare books and manuscripts it is second only to the library of the Vatican, at Rome.—Kansas City Times.

Odd Cause for Delay

Two golfers playing an important tie were annoyed by a slow couple in front of them, obviously new to the game.

"At one hole there was a particularly long wait. One of the offending couple dawdled on the fairway while his companion searched industriously in the rough.

"At length the waiting couple on the tee could contain their impatience no longer.

"Why don't you help your friend to find his ball?" one shouted indignantly.

The idle golfer in front turned with a cheerful smile.

"Oh, he's got his ball," he replied blandly. "He's looking for his club."
