Foretell Weather by Watching the Birds

That birds are able to perform feats that are impossible to human beings has long been known to science, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. They have, for instance, a most marvelous sense of direction. This cannot be put of the memory, for young birds reared in England will go straight to the same African haunts to which their parents went weeks before them.

But it is as weather prophets that birds excel, according to an English naturalist. Swallows, martins and swifts, he says, will tell if the following day is to be fine. If they are flying really high, say, 500 to 1,000 feet above the ground, a whole week of sunshine may be expected. If they are only 50 feet high, the outlook is doubtful. But if they skim a few feet above the ground, rain is certain.

A tame raven invariably slept on the southwest porch of a home. Twice in two years it changed to the northwest side, and both times a terrific gale blew from the southwest. When a wood filled with singing birds is suddenly silenced a thunderstorm is usually due. It often is observed, too, that if migrating birds fly north instead of south late in fall a mild winter may be expected.

"Pennsylvania Dutch" Is Language Mixture

During 1683 a systematic German immigration into this country began. In the course of the year a party of Mennonites, the "hook-and-eye people" now living all over the country, came from the German city of Crefeld and landed near Philadelphia upon land owned by William Penn, upon whose invitation they came. Contrary to popular belief in the Century Magazine. Some time later they founded Germantown, six miles above Philadelphia. Shortly afterward, in successive waves of almost equal numbers they came one after the other and settled in all parts of Pennsylvania. At the time of the Revolution one-third of the population of Pennsylvania was of German birth or descent. Soon mixing with the Dutch that lived there, they formed a virtually new language, more or less a compilation or corruption of the two, which is known today as Pennsylvania Dutch.

A Family of Z's

Some names have a queer, not to say a perverse, humor in names, and when they happen to be parents they often inflict on their offspring names that are a lifelong embarrassment. A writer in the Boston Herald recalls the case of a man named Zuriel Cook, who, having been cursed with an outlandish name, determined that all his children should suffer with him. Zuriel Cook married Polly Lombard at Henderson, N. Y., early in the Nineteenth century. His large family of children were named as follows: Zuriel, Zepesa, Zerema, Zelous, Zephronia, Zerolna, Zedina, Zegotis, Zelora, Zethaniel, Zeruth, Zelobus, Zedelia and last of all James.

It is fair to presume that James was a posthumous child. If Mr. Cook had lived the boy would probably have been named Zephaniah or Zerubbabel.

Nature's Laboratory

Reaching a temperature below 80 degrees Fahrenheit, the Great Salt Lake manufactures sodium sulphate, and accidentally casts it up on the beach. The fact that the deposit of sodium sulphate can be gathered before it goes back into solution has led to the construction of a plant for harvesting and refining the material into a commercial product. The average period of production will be two months each year. During a season of mild winter there may be none produced, and during years of cold winter the sodium sulphate may be precipitated for three months, judging by weather records of 20 years.

Small Change

A keen rider to hounds was out with a strange pack, and owing to a series of mishaps had got out of touch with the field. Jogging along a country lane he came to a child searching the ground carefully at the foot of a tall hedge. "What are you doing there, my boy?" asked the sportsman curiously. "Lookin' for small change, sir," grinned the lad. "The master always jumps higher than 'is 'orse at this 'edge." —Edinburgh Weekly Scotsman.

Decision Called For

People who "change their minds," as they term it, in time form a habit that disqualifies them for positions requiring decision and action. No one wants to make a wrong decision but every one who expects to "get on in the world" must acquire the habit of prompt decision.—Grit.

She spends his earnings wisely

MAN earns and woman spends. For many years this has been the popular plan in the American home. And in most cases it is a very good arrangement.

Too seldom, however, does the wife-and-mother receive due credit for her part in the enterprise. Earning a comfortable income today is a mighty fine accomplishment—"a man's job," sure enough. But the wise investment of the family funds is also far from child's play. This most often is Mother's task, and she deserves a medal for her able handling of it.

Women as a rule are good buyers, because they study their problems. They budget their resources, adjust their purchasing schedule to the budget, and buy carefully.

The best help they get in marketing comes from the ads in their home newspaper. They find that intelligent study of ads means economy of money and time.

The woman in your home knows how true this is!
