Cooperation of City And Community Is Stressed at C. of C.

Representatives of Farmers' Union Lunch With Civic Organization.
Business Men of City and Country Addressed By County Agent.

Cooperation between city and surrounding community was emphasized at both the Tuesday noon luncheon of the chamber of commerce and the Tuesday evening meeting of the chamber.

At the luncheon O. A. Nichols and Professor S. T. White were present as representatives of Const fork local of the Farmers' union. The chamber of commerce recently extended free membership to two members of each local of the union and the grange. Mr. Nichols spoke briefly and said he could see no reason why the city organization and the community organization could not work together for the interest of members of both.

Pastor Duncan P. Cameron delivered an address in which he advocated observance in the fullest sense of the principle of the golden rule, "Whatsoever ye would that others should do unto you, do ye even so unto them." He graphically illustrated the results that might be easily obtained through the observance of this rule in the business world and stated that business has already recognized that only upon this basis can it do its part in the community and hope to continue its existence.

E. S. Fletcher, county agent, was given the entire time of the evening business session and he delivered an address that should have been heard by the entire community, instead of by the comparative small number present, who were almost equally business men of the city and business men of the country, as the county agent designated them. "The business man of the country is one who has managed to stay on his farm during recent years and keep his bills paid. There is as much need for the business man in the country as in the city."

Many ways in which the two classes of business men can cooperate were pointed out by the agent, who said that the city can not prosper without the country and the country cannot prosper without a city. The promotion of better herds and community purchases of government explosives for use on the farms, were two activities in which cooperation of the two classes was urged. The marketing of cream, cattle and eggs was suggested as an opportunity for cooperative effort, although the county agent's office does not give a great deal of time to marketing problems, his efforts being devoted largely to production problems and the encouragement of marketing organizations now in existence.

The organization of a south Lane coyote club was suggested for the protection of cattle during the time that no bounty is being paid for the destruction of predatory animals. Mr. Fletcher gave a resume of the accomplishments of his office during the past six months.

The county agent asked The Sentinel to state that his office day is Monday. Upon other days it is difficult to find him in his office.

Raspberries Continue To Ripen

There has been no weather as yet to completely discourage berries from ripening in this favored section of the famous, fertile, fruitful Willamette. Ripe raspberries were reported for Thanksgiving, and they continue to ripen, and now raspberries are producing a second crop. At least they are on year old bushes on the N. E. Glass place southeast of the city. The bushes are comparatively heavy with green berries. Wild strawberries are blossoming for the second time this year, while posies continue to bloom everywhere.

LIQUOR POURED INTO SINK AT COURT HOUSE

Moonshine Valued at $625 Is Destroyed; Owner Pays Fine.

Moonshine whisky, valued at prevailing prices at $625, was poured into the sink Tuesday afternoon at the sheriff's office in the county courthouse in Eugene. Eighty quarts and 138 pints comprised the lot, which was captured November 19 when John Watson, deputy sheriff, caught Chester Hazen after a chase through the streets of Eugene.

Hazen told officers he intended to deliver the liquor to Eugene bootleggers. He was thought to have brought the shipment from Portland. Hazen paid a fine of $400 and has been released from jail.

CONNECTING ROAD LINK IS ASKED IN PETITION

Establishment of Road From Lynx Hollow West Is Urged.

Petitions have been filed with the county court by a number of residents of county road districts 13 and 69 asking that a road be established connecting the Lynx Hollow road with the Cottage Grove-Lorane route.

The proposed road would be three miles in length. The court will have the board of road viewers inspect the project.

Hard to Guess.

That world-famed writer, Mr. H. G. Wells, is extremely fond of telling this little story, possibly because it savors of his profession—writing.

At a certain fancy-dress ball all the costumes were intended to represent names of famous books.

The majority of book titles were promptly recognized, but every one was puzzled by the costume of one charming young lady. It was designed to look like a patent cigarette lighter. All sorts of titles were suggested, but to each one the girl shook her head.

Finally, someone ventured to ask her outright the title of the book represented by her dress.

"Why," she laughed. "Don't you see? It's 'The Light That Failed.'"

RALPH HAND TO MEET TOP NOTCH GRAPPLERS

Manager Plans to Make Local Man Contender for Championship.

Ralph Hand, Cottage Grove grappler, will try his wares against Bull Montana, Ad Santell and other top notchers in the light-heavyweight division during a series of matches arranged in Eugene by William B. Dodelle, who has signed a contract to manage Hand's mat activities for a year. His first match will be with Frank Burns of Flint, Mich. They will meet December 9 in the Heilig theater, Eugene.

Mr. Dodelle's plan is to put Hand under intensive training and find matches that will carry him to the top of the wrestling list and make him a contender for the title in his division. Their contract calls for road work and daily training. Dodelle is importing a professional wrestler from Omaha, who has handled Joe Stecher ex-heavyweight champion. Robin Reed, world's amateur champion, will also appear in the matches.

T. W. Harris Dies At Eugene Home

Pioneer Physician Active in Affairs of Community For Many Years.

Dr. T. W. Harris, pioneer Eugene physician, died Monday at his home in that city after a long illness. He was 76 years of age. Funeral services were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Veatch chapel. Pastor E. V. Stivers of the First Christian church conducted the services.

Dr. Harris was born near Russellville, Indiana, December 27, 1849. His father, John Moses Harris, was a noted minister of the Christian church. His family moved to Minnesota in 1854 and a year later to Adams county, Illinois, where Dr. Harris attended public school. The family crossed the plains with ox and horse teams, arriving in Portland September 11, 1865. In the same fall they located on a farm near Albany.

Dr. Harris attended public schools in Linn county and attended Albany college two years. He spent one year at Christian college, Monmouth, and then taught school for three years in Linn county. In 1872 he was graduated from the Ohio Medical college and in the same year began practice of medicine in Albany. In 1875 he took a post graduate course in medicine at the University of California and in 1878 moved to Eugene, returning to Albany two and a half years later. His actual residence in Eugene dates from 1884.

Dr. Harris was prominent in medical circles. He was a member of the Lane County Medical society since its origin and was elected president of the organization five times. He was also a member of the Oregon State Medical association and the American Medical association.

Dr. Harris was a member of several Masonic bodies and a member of the Elks lodge. He was mayor of Eugene from 1889 to 1901. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Pearl Harris and two children, Judge L. T. Harris and Mrs. Agnes Harvey, all of Eugene. Mrs. N. W. White of Cottage Grove is a niece.

Bunge Finds Wantad Result Getter

Bunge, the south Fifth street gasoline potentate, says that there is nothing more active than a Sentinel wantad. In Monday's paper he advertised that he had found a truck tire which owner could have by proving property. Almost before the ink had set on the paper, the owner of the tire had seen the ad and had claimed his property.

CASE AGAINST COUNTY SET TO BEGIN MONDAY

Portland Judge to Hear Arguments In Suit for Wages.

Judge John H. Stevenson of Portland will hear the case of Stanley Gregor against Lane county in which the county is sued for several thousand dollars alleged to be due county road workmen for overtime. The trial will begin Monday in Benton county, a change of venue having been obtained. John S. Medley, district attorney, will be assisted in defense of the case by L. T. Harris of Eugene, former justice of the supreme court. The case was instituted more than a year ago by workmen who had been employed on a county rock crusher several years ago. The county alleges that the men agreed to work overtime for regular wages.

Lloyd Is Calm As He Steps on Trap At Penitentiary

Former Cottage Grove Lad Pays Penalty for Taking Life of Taxi Driver.

Drink and Bad Company Are Blamed for Plight By Condemned Man.

Salem, Ore., Nov. 30.—William R. Lloyd, who killed Clinton I. Bann, garage owner at Independence, Polk County, on September 1 last, was hanged in the execution chamber of the Oregon state penitentiary here this morning.

For the first time in the history of the Oregon prison two women sought admission to the execution chamber. These women were Mrs. Bann, widow of the murdered man, and Mrs. Irvine Bann, wife of the victim's brother. Both women are residents of Independence.

The women arrived at the main gate of the prison half an hour before the time fixed for the execution and demanded admission. When asked for their credentials the women said they had received invitations to attend the hanging, but that they had been misled. Deputy Warden Lilley refused to allow the women to witness the execution, but admitted them to the prison reception room, where they remained until Lloyd's body was carried out of the institution enclosure and taken to the state hospital for cremation.

Both women protested the warden's decision, and alleged that they were entitled to witness the execution.

Lloyd, before he went to the execution chamber, bequeathed his tobacco to Tom Murray.

Lloyd, when visited by the chaplain late yesterday, was utterly unrepentant and "hard boiled," damning everything he could think of. Most of the night he spent at the windows of the little room in which he was locked. When visited by the chaplain this morning, he was in a repentant mood, and, according to the chaplain, seemed to have undergone a complete change over night.

Lloyd, in charge of two guards and the prison chaplain, entered the execution chamber at 10:03 o'clock and climbed the 13 steps leading to the scaffold.

The condemned man then was asked if he had anything to say why the decree of the court should not be carried out.

"I am the victim of bad company," replied Lloyd in low tone. "I was under the influence of liquor at the time the crime was committed. I have no hard feelings against anyone and hope that no one has any hard feelings against me."

Lloyd then stepped back on the trap and the noose was quickly adjusted. The trap was sprung at 10:04, and he was pronounced dead at 10:17 by Dr. R. L. Edwards, prison physician, and Dr. W. B. Mott.

The records show that Lloyd had two brothers serving time in the state penitentiary and another brother in the state training school for boys. Tom Lloyd was received at the prison on July 1, 1925, to serve a term of one year for burglary. H. J. Lloyd arrived at the prison on June 5 of this year to serve a term of two years for burglary. He previously was committed to the penitentiary in 1922 to serve two years for forgery.

Harold Lloyd, who is an inmate of the state training school, was sent there for delinquency and theft. He is 16 years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lloyd, parents of the man hanged here today, are residents of Cottage Grove. Lloyd was 26 years of age and had previously served a term in prison here for forgery.
