

What You Don't Expect Sometimes

Many people think of a market as merely a place at which to buy meat, while it is really far from that. The Quality market asked the ad solicitor to write an ad. They didn't know what to write it about. Here are a few of the items outside of meat that the solicitor noted on display:

- Pork and Beans
- Corned Beef
- Creamery Butter
- Cottage Cheese
- Nut Margarine
- Devilled Ham
- Dainty Spread
- Pimento Cheese
- Kraft Cheese
- Limburger Cheese
- Phenix Cheese
- Dill Pickles
- Mustard Pickles
- Olives
- Mince Meat
- Sauer Kraut
- Pickled Onions
- Ketchup
- Mayonnaise
- Mustard
- Peanut Butter

Lotteries Have Firm Hold on All Italians

The national sport of Italy is the lottery. It is the popular sport of all classes. There are many kinds of lotteries, but the one which seems to hold the popular favor is the weekly one. The charm of this weekly lottery lies in the fact that the buyer of a ticket can play a hunch. Since all Italians are superstitious, it is only natural that each has a particular "hunch" on the winning numbers in the lottery.

The eight largest cities in the kingdom are listed and after each city five numbers appear. Should anyone have an idea that Naples would draw 4, 18, 37, 34, 52, it is simplicity itself to back your hunch. You simply walk into an agency and write your own ticket. The numbers do not have to be arranged in the same sequence as drawn. For example, in the case above cited if the purchaser has selected the numbers in inverse order, or in any other order he would still win the maximum purse.—Detroit News.

Would-Be Librarians Not "Up" on History

Nearly thirty persons, some of them college graduates, applied for a certain position in the Cincinnati public library, but only eight scored a passing mark in examination.

The Pathfinder's poetry machine and its relation to poetic license must have been uppermost in the mind for the candidates who said that one of the grants of high office bestowed on a poet laureate was "certain privileges called poetic license."

Another candidate defined Sleepy Hollow as a "hollow in Kentucky that has become the setting of several books."

Marco Polo, according to one, "was the first man to try and reach the North pole."

"Before the break with England, Henry Clay uttered those immortal words, 'Give me liberty or give me death,'" wrote another.

Madame Curie was credited with being founder of the Christian Science church. "Robinson Crusoe" was said to have been the work of Robert Louis Stevenson.

The handwriting on the wall, to one young woman, referred to the last supper.

A young man said Christ was tried before Ananias.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Teachers Join Association.

Lane county, for the first time in five years, is credited with a 100 per cent enrollment in the Oregon State Teachers association, according to word received last week at the office of E. J. Moore, county superintendent of schools. The entire teacher personnel of the county will be listed in the new membership lists being prepared by the association.

Among the several physical benefits arising from the granulation of Oregon soils by lime are the following as noted by experiment station: renders soil permeable, aids reception, storage and distribution of moisture, and fortifies against "heaving" and winter killing.

Not Fit.

Alice for the first time saw a cat carrying her kitten by the nape of its neck.

"You ain't fit to be a mother," she cried scathingly. "You ain't hardly fit to be a father!"

Ought to Have.

Tess: Hazel married a man with all kinds of money.

Jess: Who is he?

Tess: A coin collector.

Tested Patrons' Hospitality

Stepping into a taxicab the other day, says the Paris Intransigent, a fare discovered a package of chocolate lying on the seat. Without hesitation he put it into his pocket, paid the chauffeur, adding a good pourboire, and was about to depart when the driver called out: "What about my chocolate?"

"Your chocolate?" queried the client, greatly taken aback. Then the chauffeur explained that he was testing the honesty of his fares, and of eleven whom he had carried that morning only two had informed him that a package of chocolate was lying on the seat. The two honest folk were a sergeant leaving for Morocco and a milliner's messenger girl. "Honest people are scarce," said the philosophic chauffeur.

Can't All Be Vegetarians

There is one very good reason why we cannot all be vegetarians, even if we would. In the first place there are not enough vegetables in the world to feed everybody, and in the second place there is not enough land on which to grow vegetables. Meat is concentrated vegetable food. Again, we must have leather, wool, feathers, horn, ivory, fur, kid, hides, hair, etc., and to get these usually means the death of the animals. So, we put our coverings outside, and their flesh inside. Vegetarianism is good enough for poets, artists and preachers, but the strenuous, virile, fighting, aggressive man requires meat.—Beauty.

Unexpected Pleasure

One side of the famous Devil's Glen was open to the public; the other side was kept strictly private by the landlord.

An American visitor, ignoring the notice boards, was walking on the private side of the Glen when he was met by a choleric old gentleman, who shouted: "What do you mean, sir, by trespassing on my property?"

"Great Scott!" replied the American. "I knew this was the Devil's Glen, but I never expected to meet the proprietor!"—London Mail.

Point Moral Lesson

"Little Apes of Nikko," sometimes known as the "Three Wise Monkeys," is the name of monkeys which appear in a mural decoration among ancient tombs of Nikko, Japan. The three monkeys are as follows: Mizaru, who sees no evil; Mikazura, who hears no evil, and Mazaru, who speaks no evil. The legend connected with these monkeys is simply a moral idea to point out the wisdom of minding one's own affairs.

Lightning in Forests

When lightning strikes a tree the ordinary result is to splinter the wood or strip off bark through the sudden generation of steam, says Nature Magazine. In the great majority of cases the tree is not set on fire. Nevertheless the aggregate number of forest fires started by lightning is in many parts of the country, greater than the number due to all other causes combined.

Altruism

Here's one you may have heard. Bill gets a cablegram from his friend Jack in Monte Carlo, reading: "Put $500 on the red for you last night and lost. Send check at once."—New York Herald-Tribune.

Things to Eat

DELICIOUS stews may be made of small pieces of meat if the family is small. Take one pound or less of round steak, cut into small pieces and add with cold water to cover a small onion or two, cook for two or three hours at a simmering temperature; the last hour add a few potatoes sliced thin and cook until they are soft. There should be some suet added with the meat to give richness to the stew. Season with salt and pepper, adding water if needed, and serve very hot.

Lamb Stew.—Cut three pounds of the neck of lamb into convenient-sized pieces for serving, brown in three tablespoonfuls of drippings, add two onions cut into dice, one carrot diced, one sprig of parsley, one small piece of bay leaf, two cloves, eight peppercorns and salt to taste. Pour over one cupful of boiling water, one cupful of tomatoes; add six diced potatoes and two cupfuls of peas. Simmer on the back part of the stove for three hours or cook five minutes at the boiling temperature, then place in a fireless cooker for five hours.

Pork Chops and Parsnip Stew.—Put six or eight pork chops into a kettle, add five good-sized parsnips which have been washed and scraped and cut into one-inch pieces, add five diced potatoes, one chopped onion, salt and pepper to season. Cook slowly for twenty minutes, thicken with flour blended with cold water, cover closely and simmer for three hours on the back of the stove.

Hungarian Stew.—Take two pounds of lean shoulder steak, cut into small pieces and marinate with two tablespoonfuls of strong vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of grated onion, one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of caraway seed, the same of sweet marjoram, leaving it two hours. Add the meat and seasonings, two tablespoonfuls of butter, cook until brown, add one tablespoonful of flour, simmer for four hours. Add one-half cupful of cream, a dash of paprika and serve.
