Little Is Understood of Insect Migration

There is, of course, a great deal that we do not know. In the final analysis, "all things go out into mystery," and your most dry-as-dust professor is left at the counter of his laboratory with his mouth open and his short-sighted eyes raised in a childish query. Still, he has detected law and order and reasonableness and the succession of cause and effect in many branches of biology, including bird migration.

It is not so with insect migration, which may be on a big scale. This remains a thorough-going miracle, still quite unplumbed. In England we entertain quite a considerable number of butterflies from overseas, though their arrival or passage over the sea is rarely observed. But such little flights of a hundred miles or so are as nothing compared with some recent examples.

Butterflies will fly 3,000 miles on occasion. That lovely creature—not so common here as we could wish—the painted lady, has appeared in Iceland at the end of a journey—so it is credibly alleged—from Africa! Quite large groups of white butterflies have settled on ships in the Mediterranean, on their way from south to north. So Africa certainly exchanges insects with Europe.—Sir W. Beach Thomas in the Outlook.

Railroads Can Dispute Claims to Precedence

There probably will be all sorts of rivalries and disputes in the near future over the question of precedence among American railroads, just as there were a few years ago over the date and identity of the first steamboat. It seems not unlikely that the honor will have to be divided and distributed according to the interpretation of the term. The first road on which vehicles ran on rails was perhaps that on Beacon hill, in Boston, in 1807. The first road to employ steam power seems to have been the 27-mile stretch built by the Delaware & Hudson Canal company in 1827 from Honesdale to Carbondale, Pa. The first road to carry passengers was probably the Baltimore & Ohio, which in May, 1830, began running from Baltimore to Ellicott's mill, 15 miles, by horse power.

Famous Obelisk

The obelisk in Central Park, New York, is thirty-five centuries old. As the Standard Guide to New York remarks: "It was old when Moses read its inscriptions in honor of the Egyptian sun god." It stood before the temple of the Sun at Heliopolis, near Cairo, where it was erected in the Sixteenth century B. C. by Thothmes III. In twelve B. C. Augustus Caesar carried the obelisk to Alexandria. Here it and two others were erected before the temple of the Caesars. In 1877 it was presented by the khedive of Egypt to the United States, and brought to America by Lieutenant-Commander Gorringe, U. S. N. It was erected in Central park in 1881, William H. Vanderbilt bore the expense of removal, which was $102,576. The obelisk is a monolith of syenite from the granite quarries of Syene, Egypt. The shaft is 69½ feet high, 7 feet 9 inches by 7 feet 8½ inches at the base and weighs 448,000 pounds.

Wild Pigeons All Gone

Vast numbers of wild pigeons were seen in this country prior to 1865, though not in such great numbers as earlier in the century, namely 1800 to 1850. The slaughter of these pigeons raged for years with nets, traps and guns and by 1884 there were very few of the wild pigeons seen in this country. By 1900 they had dwindled down to a few specimens left in captivity in Milwaukee and in the Cincinnati zoo. Martha, the last known wild pigeon, died 2 p. m., August 29, 1914, at the age of twenty-nine. According to all ornithological data available, she was the last of her tribe in the world. Martha's mate died in 1910, and though a prize of $1,000 was offered for a mate, none was ever found.

Brain Measure Won't Work

A doctor friend tells us there is nothing to the scheme to measure the brains of congressmen to find out how much they know, that the most brilliant senator New York ever had had a very small head. . . . When it comes to brain power it is quality, not quantity, that counts. In the laboratory of a great medical school is the brain of a world-famous genius, so small that it is little more than half the weight of the average human brain.—Capper's Weekly.

Nothing to Worry About

To hear some young women talk they would be very choosey in selecting a husband. When it comes to domestic ability, men are not so finicky, if we may believe this paragraph from Judge: The ceremony over, the wife began to weep copiously. "What's the matter?" asked the new husband. "I—I never told you that I don't know how to cook," sobbed the bride. "Don't fret," said he, "I'll not have anything to cook. I'm an editor."—Capper's Weekly.

Meteoric Visitors

It is computed that between 10,000,000 and 20,000,000 meteors strike the earth's atmosphere daily. Two or three meteorites are seen to fall yearly. Since a large part of the earth is covered with water or uninhabited, it is thought probable that about 100 strike the earth annually. It is not known positively that meteors and meteorites are composed of the same materials.
