

IF IGNORANCE Of the Profession Was UNLAWFUL

Banks would be more careful in taking the business of others intrusted to them. An ignorance of the profession is not unlawful, the public should be especially careful that their business is intrusted to a bank officered by individuals not only well versed in the profession, but also with long years of experience. A bank with ample capital and surplus—a prosperous, progressive bank. We offer you such service and cordially invite your business.

Address By Pastor.

"The Second Coming of Christ, the Age Old Delusion." There are folks in Cottage Grove waiting daily expecting to be caught up in the air. Come and hear the truth of this question discussed from Scripture.

The following interesting questions will be answered:

- (1) Do social troubles in the home impair a man's business standing?
 - (2) If evil exists in the world why not portray it on the stage and in the press?
 - (3) Which would be choice of majority, life everlasting or no life after death?
 - (4) Do you think that those who say they talk in tongues are sincere?
 - (5) Do the dead sleep in the grave or do they go direct to heaven?
 - (6) Is it essential to believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ?
- The choir will render special music, come and enjoy the Friendly Church.

No Place for a Lady

At a small country station a freight train pulled in and sidetracked for the passenger train. The passenger arrived and pulled out; then the freight started to do its switching. A placid, well-dressed woman had alighted from the passenger train and was passing close to one of the freight brakemen when he yelled to his buddy: "Jump on her when she comes by. Bill, run her down by the elevator, cut her in two and bring the head end up by the depot!"

The lady picked up her skirts and ran for the station yelling murder at every jump.—Everybody's Magazine.

Why She Proclaimed Encyclopedia Faulty

"Dear," remarked Mrs. Roberts to her husband as he came in from business, mopping a heated brow, "I think you waste a terrible amount of money."

Roberts spun around and regarded his wife with a look of deepest suspicion, while a gleam came into his eyes.

"I waste money, my dear?" he questioned. "Why, I have never wasted a cent in my life!"

"Oh, yes, you have," answered his wife, while all the time Roberts' brow grew blacker. "That encyclopedia you bought on the installment plan last month is no good at all."

"Oh, that!" laughed the husband, as his frown vanished. "Well, what's wrong with it?"

"I'll tell you," came his wife's confiding reply. "This morning I wanted to find out why it rains when there's a new moon."

"Oh, and where did you look for that?" asked Roberts, a smile hovering round his mouth.

"I looked under 'Why,' of course, and I didn't even find the word there at all!"

Swimming to Work

Pacific Islanders are probably the cleanest people on earth, for they spend a good part of every day in the water, and may be said to be almost as amphibious as seals. The children learn to swim almost as soon as they learn to walk. If the village happens to be at some distance from the shore, a swimming pool is formed in a nearby stream, and there mixed bathing is indulged in several times every day.

With the skin constantly greased with coconut oil, the pulp of the bitter green orange makes a good soap and lathers freely. Dame Nature also supplies them with scrubbers, the husks of coconut, and this they apply to their shining bodies very vigorously. Their towel is provided by the sun and wind.

When Windows "Sweat"

The sweating of windows is due to imperfect ventilation, and if perfect ventilation could be obtained it would probably give the most effective results. In many cases openings are made in the sash, top and bottom, so that a current of cold air may cover the interior side of the glass. In some instances, where the sweating of windows is not so bad, 55 grams of glycerin is dissolved in 1 liter of alcohol (68 per cent), to which a little amber oil is added. As soon as it is thoroughly mixed, it may be rubbed on the inside surface of the window with a chamol or linen rag. A thin coat of pure glycerin applied to both sides of the glass will prevent moisture.

Collecting Debts in 1647

Old residents of England had their own ideas of debt payment and their own methods of enforcing payment where the customer was not interested in meeting the obligation. One old method in use in 1647 was a debtor's chair, that would be placed in the office of the man to whom the debt was due. The debtor was invited to enter and, when seated in the chair, a trigger was released that clamped iron boops about the knees of the debtor and held him helpless while the other man negotiated a settlement, and the use of the chair in enforcing payment was entirely legal and in general use.—Ohio State Journal.

Little Energy in Talking

The speech energy of the human voice amounts to very little in the way of power. It is only 125 ergs a second, an almost infinitesimally small amount of power. Consonant letters require the least amount of energy. The pitch or frequency of vibrations is much higher for consonant sounds, than the vowels, however. An erg is the work done when a body moves one centimeter in the direction in which it is urged by a force of one dyne, and a dyne is a force which when acting on a mass of one gram for one second will change its velocity by one centimeter per second.

Best Floor Bleach

Oxalic acid is recommended for bleaching an oak floor, using the acid at the rate of one pound to the gallon of water, and adding to the solution a little spirits of niter. Apply the acid hot. When the bleached portions are dry they must be well washed to remove the acid from the wood. Oxalic acid is a poison and should not be applied with a rag held in the fingers, but should be brushed on.
