Visitors Find Ready

Welcome in Denmark

It is a common habit of American towns to erect a colossal "Welcome" sign by the railway stations for the information of tourists.

In England and also in America hundreds of homes have inscribed the magic word on the doormat, where of course, the visitor wipes his boots.

In Denmark, however, there are no electric signs to bid you welcome, and no house "says it with doormats," but I venture to say that there is not a town or village in the country, where it is not written on the face of every blue-eyed Dane that you meet.

From modern Esbjerg to ancient Elsinore, from Frederikshavn to Moen, every face seems to say, "We are glad to see you in our country." And what a country it is, in which to take pleasure in such a welcome! Surrounded by the sea on nearly all sides, a kingdom of islands, lakes and woods.

From the rugged cliffs of Bornholm, wood-encircled fjords and romance-encrusted castles provide a welcome whose sincerity can never be doubted.—From "My European Excursions," by Edwin Robert Petrie.
