hands above your head and walk out of the shelter, proceeding to the police station. I shall walk behind you and I will blow out your brains if you show any signs of playing the fool."

"Right you are, missy," whined Wilnot. "Any port in a storm.
You have got me on toast, and I shan't play the fool."

From his point of view he certainly didn't. Holding his hands high, he made for the door, but half way to it he swung his left arm down and knocked the lamp off the table, plunging the place into darkness. Whipping round like a wild cat, he had the girl in his arms, and as she was borne to the ground with his fetid breath on her cheek she sobbed as if her heart would break.

Lord Balpeter's trudge to Hangman's heath was without result.
He found that desolate spot unfrequented except by rabbits and he trudged back to the inn in bad humor with himself and all the world. To have to wait till six o'clock on the following afternoon to keep the appointment which he felt sure had been penned by Adele under compulsion was more than he could stand. The obvious thing to do was to ascertain something about the latest known movements of Miss Larkin. She was capable of playing practical jokes and might not be missing at all. He sent for the landlord.

"Look here," he said. "I have to go out again, but I am expecting Inspector Roake. If he arrives before I return ask him to follow me to the rectory, and tell him I said things were moving."

The landlord gave the required assurance and the gentleman vouched for by Sir Trevor Hardman

Can Always Do That

Bill—You know, when I get so old and feeble that I can't do anything but sit around I want to die off.

Bang—I don't. I want to live just as long as possible.

Bill—What do you think you'll get out of life when you get old like that?

Bang—Boy, I'll get a big kick out of just sitting around and crabbing about how the younger generation is going to the bowwows.

Old National Emblems

Previous to the union of England and Scotland the shield of England was upheld by two lions. The shield of Scotland was upheld by two unicorns. After the union the lion appeared on one side and the unicorn on the other. Before the union the English shield contained three lions passant (walking) on a field of gold.
The Scotch shield contained the lion rampant (standing on its hind legs) on a field of gold.

Shadowed.

This Lady—You're a coward.
You're even afraid of your own shadow.

Fat Lady—Well, why would I be? It looks like a crowd following me.—Pomona "Sagehen."

my operation?

You were unconscious.—Toronto

Off the Reservation.

They were telling a yarn in the white light belt about a small-town booking agent who heard of an all-Indian jazz band recently arrived in New York. He taxied to a Brooklyn theater and went backstage to the manager of the act.

"Are all of you really Indians?" he asked. "If you are I think I can arrange a long route. You are really Indians, hey?"

"'Vat would be the use of kiddin' mit you?" replied the leader. "Ve are 'all fool-blodt.'"—From Everybody's.

Some folks are just as useful as rats at a Chinese banquet, all they are good for is to fill the chinks.

This so-called painted knee pad seems to be one of those things everybody knows all about and nobody has ever seen.
