Ancient Methods of Heating and Lighting

The time when man's curiosity and courage first enabled him to investigate the phenomena of fire was certainly not less than 35,000 years ago. It probably happened in Europe during the Glacial age.

One of the earliest methods was by twirling a pointed stick in a hole in dry wood, leading to the hearth fire. This was followed by the shell lamp—a shell filled with animal fats or fish oil, with grass or moss as the wick.

The oldest bronze lamp known was found in Cyprus, and is probably 4,000 years old. In Homer's Odyssey the use of three braziers in the palace to give light is mentioned—a method made possible by the fact that roofs were commonly open in those days.

Coming to more recent times, the cresset, a species of cage filled with old rope smeared with pitch, was in use.

Candles were first introduced by the Phoenicians about 1000 years B. C., after which they became the regular indoor luminaire. About 400 B. C., candles in all the chief countries of Europe were displaced by oil lamps of clay and bronze and did not return to common use for a thousand years.

The first friction match (the tucfer) was not invented until 1827, and a box of fifty cost half a crown (80 cents). The introduction of the Swedish safety match dates to about fifty years ago.—London Tit-Bits.

Winter Rains Stored for Time of Drought

In southern California, where land without water is worth little, various means have to be adopted to conserve the winter rainfall, or the dry summer months. From May till October land owners depend on the underground water supply.

A recent development has been the construction of a vast natural "sponge" destined to hold the flood waters from the great canyons in the district. The water from the melting snow or rains is distributed over nearly 800 acres of rock and sandy land, covered from end to end with sage bushes. This area has been intersected by specially constructed ditches, with concrete distributing gates, by means of which the water is kept circulating. Instead of pouring away to waste.

At the height of the season this wonderful "sponge" soaks up not less than 100,000 inches of rain, all of which can be pumped to the surface when required.

Official Sauerkraut

A definition and standard for sauerkraut has been adopted by the secretary of agriculture as a guide for the officials of the department in the enforcement of the federal food and drugs act, upon the recommendation of the joint committee on definitions and standards, as follows: "Sauerkraut is the clean, sound product, of characteristic acid flavor, obtained by the full fermentation, chiefly lactic, of properly prepared and shredded cabbage in the presence of not less than 2 per cent nor more than 3 per cent of salt. It contains upon completion of the fermentation, not less than 1 1/2 per cent of acid, expressed as lactic acid. Sauerkraut which has been rebreined in the process of canning or repacking contains not less than 1 per cent of acid expressed as lactic acid."

Dog Lives in the Present

The great difference between dog and man is that the dog has hardly any power of looking into the future. Man spends most of his time thinking of what is going to happen tomorrow, next week, or next year, and preparing for it. To a dog the present is the only thing that counts.

It is true that a dog will bury a bone to be dug up later on, but in doing so he does not say to himself: "I am not so hungry now; I may be hungry tomorrow. Therefore, I will make provision." This act is merely instinctive, and to be compared with the storing of nuts by the squirrel or the dormouse.

"Laborer" Was Right

Getting one's name on the voting list in an outlying town in Massachusetts for the first time is a serious ceremony, yet with touches of humor. For instance, one lady was asked what her occupation was and she replied, "Housewife." Whereupon the registrar volunteered this one: "I asked this question of one woman and she replied, 'Laborer.' The registrar, somewhat puzzled, again queried, 'What kind of labor?' The woman replied, 'Well, I'm home all day.'—Christian Science Monitor.

Suspicious of Columbus

Columbus had returned to Spain bringing news of a wonderful new land across the sea.
"How much shall I write on it?" queried the maritime reporter of the Cadiz Evening Bulletin.
"Don't write anything," replied the city editor. "Let Columbus pay for his advertising if he wants any. It's probably a real estate promotion scheme."—New York University Medley.

Probable Reason

"Well! well! Look at that fellow running and turning his head first one way, then the other, as he goes!" exclaimed a guest. "What do you suppose he is doing that for?"
"Not knowing the gent, can't say for certain," replied the landlord of the tavern at Peewee-cuddlyhump, "but prob'ly it's b'cuz he ain't able to turn it both ways at once."—Kansas City Times.

Florida is larger than New York and Massachusetts together. Georgia is the only state east of the Mississippi that is larger than Florida.

Varied Ideas About Money and Its Uses

Probably more has been said and written about money than any other subject under the sun. Fielding, who spoke with the authority of a magistrate, once commented that "money is the fruit of evil as often as the root of it." Doctor Johnson said: "Money, in whatever hands, will confer power." In "The Way of All Flesh," Samuel Butler wrote that "money is like a reputation for ability—more easily made than kept." His modern disciple, G. Bernard Shaw, goes farther and says: "Any fool can save money; it takes a wise man to spend it." Bacon wrote: "Money is like manure; of little use unless it is spread." A quotation from Horace reads: "Money amassed either serves or ruins us."

John Stuart Mill, in his monumental work "The Principles of Political Economy," points out that furs, cowrie shells and even cubes of compressed tea have been used in various places as money. He goes on to say that "money is a commodity and its value is determined, like other commodities, temporarily by demand and supply, permanently and on the average by cost of production."

No article about money would be complete without quoting an American. It seems typical of the American mind always to couple money with work—they rarely refer to the one without the other. Thus John D. Rockefeller: "I determined that, in addition to working for money, I would make money work for me."—John O' London's Weekly.

Authors Who Evincen Interest in Cookery

If the stories of Brillat-Savarin which it is proposed to publish any commemorative of his centenary reveal their author to the world as a successful writer of fiction, as well as a gastronome, he may perhaps be regarded as repaying the interest which some noted novelists have taken in matters of the table. Balzac took a keen interest in cookery, as befitted a man of gigantic appetite. So also did George Sand, whose cookery must have been pretty good, since it was reputed to be as exciting as her romances. Joseph Conrad, as he admitted in connection with a cook book written by Mrs. Conrad, gave a high place in his esteem to the culinary arts, while George Meredith left a book of cookery recipes in his own handwriting which figured in a book seller's catalogue some years ago and may possibly yet appear in print.

Food and Hibernation

Hibernating animals enter the state of hibernation more quickly and remain in it much longer when they do not get much to eat and when their supply is limited. This fact seems to have been established by experiments performed by Dr. George Johnson. He found that ground squirrels on limited rations retired to winter quarters earlier and woke up less often than those given ample food. Animals when in a state of hibernation, he found, have a body temperature much lower than that in ordinary sleep. The results were similar when some of the squirrels were placed in cans where the air supply was limited. Strangely enough, variation in light and darkness seemed to have no effect whatever upon the dates of hibernation.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Modern Dyestuffs

Modern dyestuffs can be just as fast and give just as beautiful colors as any used in past times, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It is sentiment chiefly that makes us cling to the idea that the natural dyes obtained from plants and animals are best. Many of them are lovely colors, it is true, and the time that has passed since the cloth was dipped in the dye pot has in many cases mellowed the tones and made them even lovelier. Many of the so-called artificial dyes used now are exactly the same from the chemical standpoint as those from berries and bark and other natural sources. In some cases the new dyes are better than the old. The modern manufacturer of dyestuffs knows exactly what is in them, and for that reason is surer of results.

Patriotic Pride

The term "God's country" is often applied to a nation or country by its sons and daughters. A recently published bulletin on Australia calls attention to the fact that among the white inhabitants poverty is practically unknown, the aged, infirm and children are adequately provided for, the labor situation is satisfactory and the territory itself offers unlimited possibility for development, exploitation and the exercise of man's ingenuity. All these things would make it seem a favored spot.

Another Diplomat

Five-year-old William, the son of religious parents, has been taught that Sunday is not a day for play. One Sunday his mother was surprised and horrified to find him sailing his toy boat in the bathtub.
"William!" she exclaimed. "Don't you know it's wicked to sail boats on Sunday?"
"Now don't get excited, mother," was the calm reply. "This isn't any pleasure excursion. This is a missionary boat going to darkest Africa."—The Open Road.

Doctor Was Right

"Buy a car," said the doctor, "and get out more. You ought to take off pounds."
Speaking of the results obtained by this prescription, the patient says:
"I got a car and got out more. I got out six times between London and Coventry and took off flesh in four different places. Once I got out through the windshield. That seemed to take off the most flesh."—London Tit-Bits.
