electric chair, doctor," coolly remarked his tormentor. "If he dies under the effect of it I don't think anything in the world can keep you from the current. Now, if I were you, and there was any antidote for the poison, I'd get busy administering it. What do you think?"

The man nodded and gulped. "I—I will try it!" he stammered. "Don't waste time, then, for I expect a ship will be here any hour to take us off."

"If you'll let me, I'll give him treatment now—right away!" replied the doctor eagerly.

"All right. I'm not hindering you. But—" slowly and impressively, "remember this: I have two witnesses to your confession, and if Mr. Cutler dies you'll be held responsible. Under the circumstances, I wouldn't play any trick or try to double-cross me. If you attempt it I'd shoot you like a dog and with less compunction. Now get busy with your medicines."

Alister glanced furtively at him. "If I save his life," he began meekly, "you—you won't inform on me?"

"I'm making no promises," replied Dick sharply. "I'm giving you the chance to save yourself from the electric chair."

All the morning Dick watched with the others by the side of their patient. The strain of the situation began to tell on Alice, and toward noon Dick led her into an alcove beyond the hearing of the other two.

"You must go out and get fresh air, Miss Cutler," he said gently. "You're losing the roses in your cheeks. I'll watch."

"Do you think I'd quit when you—you—Oh," she exclaimed impulsively, "how can I ever thank you! You've saved uncle's life, and protected me from something worse!"

Dick took the two hands extended to him and held them an instant. "I'm already rewarded," he replied, bowing his head. "Your gratefulness is enough."

"And to think," she added, smiling through tears, "I took you at first for the cause of all our trouble."

"What did you think I was?" he asked, his eyes twinkling.

Her face flushed under his gaze. "Why, I thought you were in some sort of a plot to rob us. You see, Mr. Blake had sent the servants down ahead of us, and when we found them gone we were puzzled and alarmed. Then your appearance on the island looked suspicious."

"You never suspected Blake?"

"No, why should I? He had been uncle's secretary for years. Uncle trusted him, and turned over most of his private papers into his keeping. I used to think at times that Mr. Blake had more influence over uncle than I, and it piqued me. But I never dreamed of his doing anything—" She stopped, and looked quickly, "What was the plot? What did he intend to do? I'm all mystified yet. I simply know that—that—"

"—he made love to you, and when you refused him he threatened you," Dick finished for her.

"How did you know that?" She asked, flushing a rich, rosy red.

"I've been an eavesdropper ever since we sailed," he laughed. "I seem to have lost all sense of decency in that respect."

"Eavesdropping in a good cause is nothing to be ashamed of," she replied, giving him a smile that made him dizzy.

Recovering from the momentary confusion caused by her smile, he asked: "What excuse did Mr. Blake give for sending the yacht away that first night?"

"To get more servants."

"And you believed him?"

"Yes, but I rebuked him for doing it without consulting me first. I told him we should turn right around and go back home."

"I see," mused Dick thoughtfully. "Perhaps he thought you'd want to do something like and he forestalled it by sending the yacht away at once. He didn't want to take a chance keeping it here. Of course, he was very sorry and all that—very contrite, wasn't he?"

"You seem to read him pretty well, Mr.—"

He smiled when she stopped for him to enlighten her. "Dick's the only name I have down here," he said. Then changing the subject quickly, he added, "You say Mr. Blake, as your uncle's private secretary, was trusted by him in many important matters? Do you happen to know whether he had the composition of his private safe and deposit vaults?"

"Yes, I think he did."

"Then that will explain many matters," was the quiet remark.

She watched him curiously, waiting for him to explain, but he had grown suddenly dumb. Walking to the window in the alcove he glanced through it. A wonderful panorama of the sea was spread before him. She followed, and together they watched the heaving bosom of the ocean, fascinated by the shimmering path of gold that the sun made on the waves.

Suddenly her eyes opened wide, and, with finger pointing, she exclaimed exultantly, "A ship! Rescue's coming!"

Dick gave one hasty glance, and then caught her hand and jerked it down. "Be quiet!" he whispered. "It's the Pelican!"

Your Good Credit Name Is An Asset and Convenience to You

Keep Your Credit Good
By Prompt Payment

You may have said, "I will always pay cash as I go"—then sickness suddenly comes or your income is temporarily cut off and you are forced to test your credit standing.

Then again you may want to take advantage of a sudden opportunity for a worthwhile investment, your ready money will not be available for some time and you turn to the legitimate use of your credit or you borrow on your earning capacity.

Again you find it very inconvenient to keep cash on hand for every transaction and you find it necessary to telephone your orders to save time or it is necessary on occasion to send the children to do your shopping and for these reasons you prefer to pay at the end of a thirty-day period. All of these are legitimate reasons for the conservative use of your credit and in many other ways your credit can be a great convenience to you.

The majority of business firms of Cottage Grove and vicinity have agreed upon "Thirty Days" as the period of open book accommodation. Keep your credit good by paying promptly and in full each thirty day period. All members of the Credit Association are required to report all delinquent accounts. Keep your record clear. Current bills cover daily necessities and should be paid first. Do not contract installment purchases which, added to your current bills, total more than your known earning capacity.
