Another Movie Film May Be Made Here

It is possible that Cottage Grove may retain permanently its title as the Hollywood of Oregon. A clipping from a Los Angeles paper was received here Saturday which stated that another large company might follow Buster Keaton. The headlines were, "If Cottage Grove Is Good Enough for Buster Keaton It Is Good Enough for Us." The person who received the clipping has lost it and the name of the company likely to come was not remembered.

Cottage Grove has also been considered for the production of 40 two-reel comedies. Everything around Los Angeles has been "shot" to pieces and the Cottage Grove country offers a setting that can not be found elsewhere.

Tacks for Tires Are Stuck Into Pear

A new method for spreading tacks designed to wreck automobile tires has been discovered by some miscreant who might become a wealthy man if his talents were correctly directed. The tacks were stuck into a green pear, being shoved into the pear until their heads were concealed. A whole box of shoemakers' brads was used to fill the pear, which was placed in front of the Wynne & Kline hardware. The brads were not purchased there, however. The trap that had been set was discovered when Mr. Wynne parked his car in front of his store. A tire crunched the pear and air escaped from a dozen punctures.

Snake Found Imbedded In Asphaltum

A live snake imbedded in asphaltum was the find made this forenoon at the N. J. Nelson Jr. automobile salesroom. Ground was being cleared outside the building for some used cars. Several barrels of asphaltum had stood for several months where the snake was found. Some of the asphaltum had run onto the ground and had hardened and cracked. Apparently the snake had crawled into one of the cracks and had become lodged there and when the sun came out the asphaltum from the barrels dripped onto the snake and securely sealed it in the asphaltum and dirt.

Thousand Cars Come To See Buster

It has been estimated that a thousand or more cars were here yesterday with sightseers attracted by the presence of the Buster Keaton company. The company put in the day working at Dorena and the Row river road had the biggest single day's traffic in its history, which dates from about the period which the Keaton picture will depict.

Neet Wins His Matches.

Harry Neet won two one-fall matches Saturday evening from the wrestlers with the Browning amusement carnival. He threw Tiny Simmons in 13 minutes with a body scissors and reverse wristlock. He pinned George Lambert in 20 minutes with a toe hold and reverse headlock. Simmons weighed 150, Lambert 175 and Neet 161. The matches were to a finish with nothing barred except the strange hold.

Neet wrestled Thursday and Friday with the carnival performers and stayed the limit.

HERE is a western story with all the action of the best, as finely written as Theodore Roosevelt's "Winning of the West," set against an historical background as interesting as that of Emerson Hough's "The Covered Wagon." It is exceptionally authentic too, the characters and episodes being drawn from people and scenes with which Will Irwin was personally familiar in his youth and young manhood.
