CLAUDE IS JEALOUS.

At last we have succeeded in making Claude Ingalls jealous. Claude is the Adonis who presides over the destinies of the Corvallis Gazette-Times, which is Oregon's self-appointed connoisseur of legs, male, feminine and otherwise, especially feminine. Connoisseur legs is the method Claude has taken to get a kick during the life of the eighteenth amendment. It is said by those who know him best that he is subject to overindulgence in this favorite elixir almost to the point of intoxication.

This certainly would be a pleasant method of getting intoxicated and there wouldn't be a headache in a barrelful.

But it probably is unfair to charge Claude with intoxication because of overindulging in so pleasant and entertaining a predilection. Claude probably becomes blinded by the effulgent rays of the setting sun, for Claude likes legs best with the sun in front of them. Claude is a bear for details.

And now Claude is beside himself with jealousy because all the Hollywood girls have come to Cottage Grove. Claude has heard and read of the perfect proportions and symmetry of the nether extremities of the Hollywood girls, and he feels like the fellow who has worked hard all his life to save a few thousand dollars only to see the prodigal son fall heir to a million dollars.

Claude has spent a lifetime fitting himself for just what has happened to Cottage Grove (not that he hasn't wasted time in other ways), only to have all the luck fall to the editor of The Sentinel, who has given no attention whatever to feminine form and beauty and wouldn't be able to tell the leg of a Hollywood star from that of a Corvallis moonshiner.

We are sorry for you, Claude, but not so sorry as to prevent our enjoying the situation to the fullest extent.

An eminent neurologist says that most folks use only 20 per cent of their mental capacity. We should regret to have to believe that the amount of mental capacity used by some we could name is as great a proportion as that.

Quite frequently Forest Grove gets credit for things done in Cottage Grove. The names are too similar. Since Cottage Grove has become the movie capital of Oregon, we suggest that Forest Grove change its name.

Everywhere that President Coolidge goes plaster falls, at the white house, at church, at the theater. The story would sound more reasonable were Roosevelt president instead of Silent Cal.

Whitlock-Meranda

Miss Helen E. Meranda became the bride of Harold Ashley Whitlock at a simple home wedding held at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Morris. Pastor Duncan P. Cameron of the Presbyterian church read the wedding service. Only immediate members of the young couple's families were present. Mrs. Whitlock is a daughter of Mrs. Robert Meranda and is a popular member of the younger set. Mr. Whitlock is employed in the local J. C. Penney company store. The bride and groom left immediately after the ceremony for Portland, where they will spend a two weeks' honeymoon. Following the ceremony a reception was held. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Patman, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Stowick, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Morris, Mrs. Robert Meranda, Mrs. Herbert Schaffer and son, Miss Eunice Meranda, Miss Elsie Phueard, Miss Genevieve Meranda, H. A. Whitlock Sr., Kenneth Ward, Ed Lundon and George McQueen. The rooms were attractive with bouquets of flowers and music was furnished by George McQueen and Ed Lundon. Refreshments of punch, ice cream and cake were served.

The research club met Tuesday at the library for its final meeting of the year. The book studied was Balch's "Bridge of the Gods." The following members took part in the program: Mrs. D. C. Bosley gave interesting points in the biography of Balch, Mrs. William Baker had for her subject a review of the book, Mrs. F. E. Mendenhall gave an account of early missions in Oregon, Mrs. Van Osdel discussed the treatment of the Indians by the government, Mrs. M. S. Power told of some of the customs of Indians of Oregon, and Mrs. Duncan P. Cameron read the Indian Myth telling of origin of the Klickitat basket. The members responded to roll call by telling an Indian legend. The members were given a delightful surprise in receiving the programs for the next year's work. The meeting adjourned until September.

Rabbits as Swimmers

An investigating naturalist reports that rabbits are good swimmers and have a very real fondness for the water and the sport they find in a good swim. He says he has been hidden in the woods and watched rabbits run on a high bank and dive far out in the water, swimming about and shaking the water from their eyes, in a human fashion, then shaking the water out of their furry coats after the swim, exactly as a dog does. Prior to that discovery he had known rabbits to take to the water when pursued by a dog, but had not known they chose the water for sport when they had a day off for play and relaxation.—Ohio State Journal.

New Value to Alder

Alder, which is much used as a wood in making furniture in those sections where it grows on a commercial scale, may have another value far exceeding that for furniture. It is now believed that the little nodules or "bumps" on the roots of alder have nitrogen fixation properties. The German chemists have been working on that theory and American universities have been attempting to prove it with some degree of success. If it is true the alder, having the ability to take nitrogen direct from the air, would be a great soil builder.

Trees "Go to Sleep"

Trees put themselves to sleep for the winter, according to investigations conducted by the Westinghouse Lamp company. These investigations show that the belief that trees are "put to sleep" by the various seasonal changes is inaccurate, as the trees "go to sleep" themselves.

My Aunt Emma says the poor we have with us always, and husbands, too, so grin 'n' bear it! While there's life there's hope the calla lilies will be delivered some day! My Aunt Emma is what is known in the vernacular as a misogynist.—Chicago Post.

Simple.

A commercial traveler, visiting a large insurance office, boasted to the manager that he could pick out all the married men among the employees.

Accordingly, he stationed himself at the door as they returned from dinner and pointed out all those he believed to be married. In almost every case he was right.

"How do you do it?" asked the manager.

"The married men wipe their feet on the mat; the single ones don't."

Genuine, All Right.

A collector of antiques was showing me a little article he had got over in Palestine, and to impress me with its value he explained: "I am sure it is genuine because the boy who sold it to me assured me it was the original, for he had stolen it himself, and I believe him because he had such an honest face."

Frank Reply.

A young lawyer had just opened his first office and called in a friend to see it.

After a few minutes he asked: "Well, how do you like it as a whole?"

Much to his surprise a frank answer came forth: "As a whole it is fine; but as an office, not so good."

Possible But Not Probable.

"I knew an artist once who painted a cobweb on the ceiling so realistically that the maid spent hours trying to get it down."

"Sorry, dear, I just can't believe it."

"Why not? Artists have been known to do such things."

"Yes, but not maids."
