Tragedy Not as Great as Sailor Had Feared

In the old days all shipping advertisements in the papers used to be embellished with a picture of a ship. At first they were all sailing ships, but gradually the steamers came under the reader's eye. Columns after columns of some of the papers used to be filled with these advertisements, and a great fleet of vessels used to appear in print daily. It made the papers a bit more interesting to those who could not read and illiterate sailors used to spend much of their leisure time criticizing the cuts and ridiculing the advertisers who used pictures of brigs to advertise full-riggers.

A good story is told of an old pilot of the early days, a good old sailor, but absolutely illiterate. He picked up a paper in a stall in a saloon and made a bluff at being occupied in the reading of it. It so happened that he held the paper upside down when an acquaintance entered stinging out, "What's the news in the paper today, Abner?" Abner shook his head sorrowfully, took off his glasses, and passed the paper to his friend. "It's awful," he said, "something horrible. All the ships in the ocean are turned bottom up." The newcomer picked up the paper and held it right end up. "Cheer up, Abner, cheer up. See, they have all righted themselves."—Fall River Globe.

Peace and Promise in Nature's Temple

It was a swamp of the kind I love, miles upon miles of it, seldom marked by the footprints of men; a primitive swamp, hoary with age, where life had grown upon life through centuries of time; fragrant with a breath of mystery, filled with a vast contentment, a home for the creatures of the wild. But its age was what grew upon me. I sat upon a fallen pine that had lived five hundred years, and then had lain a century where it had fallen, crumbling once more into dust of earth. Near me was a still mightier tree rearing its head to the sky. Under my feet was the soft and sweetly musty mold of prehistoric generations of God's greatest living things on earth—the trees. Age—age and life and death—breathed together in the air, and in their mingling there seemed to be a glorious symphony of fulfillment and promise.—James Oliver Curwood in Hearst's International Cosmopolitan.

Transoceanic Talk

"Do you still want Leicester square? Here's your party."
"Are you there?"
"Hello, Johnny, this is Sam. Don't this beat the cablegram? Thought I'd give you a ring. How's the prince an' everything?"
"Oh, I say! A ripping notion! Here we chat across the ocean!"
"Thirty hundred miles or so?"
"Most extraw'd'n'ry thing, you know! Quite across the wild, gigantic, bally, blooming old Atlantic!"
"Yes, some stunt! Here's you and me talking clear across the sea. How's the weather?"
"Fog—no name!"
"Say, we're having just the same." (Here Big Ben rings.)
"Well, so long, it's time to stop."
"Au revoir. Pip-pip, old top."—New York Tribune.

Balsa Wood Valuable

Half the weight of cork, the Balsa wood of the tropics is coming into use for other purposes other than that of making life preservers and life rafts for which it was introduced in this country. It has marvelous insulating qualities. Fish, ice cream or other similar perishable articles may be packed in a lightly constructed box of this wood and shipped great distances and delivered in excellent condition. The government is testing airplane propellers made of it and quite a quantity of the wood is made use of in the construction of theatrical scenery which is to be shipped about the country. A New York architect is experimenting with it as an inner sheathing for houses. It may create a revolution in refrigeration.

Slightly in Error

"Mother, what is this Lent that you folks have been talking so much about?" asked the small daughter of Episcopalian parents. There followed a lengthy dissertation on the subject, during which the child paid close attention. At the close of the discourse, when the mother was hoping she had instilled some beautiful thoughts in the young mind, her daughter smiled angelically and said:
"Oh, so that's it. And here I thought all the time that it was that stuff you find under the bed!"

Angora Goats Best Eaters

Angora goats are the most voracious feeders known, according to a writer in the Sydney (Australia) Bulletin, who says: "I can show one a dozen acres in South Gippsland, Victoria, that 50 dinosaurs could not clean up. The blackberry is exceedingly difficult to destroy, and though new shoots spring up within a few days after the vines are cut and burned, these are kept from gaining headway by a few angora goats."

Sailors' Superstitions

Blue paint is unpopular with seafaring men, who dislike to join a vessel having any part of her painted blue, and a Scotch sea captain once refused to let an apprentice come aboard because he was carrying his worldly possessions in a blue box. The construction of a ship is still believed by many mariners to forecast her whole future, and if she sticks on the ways and is reluctant to be launched, a dark fate is predicted for her.

Thames Has Double Ebb.

It is a rare thing that interesting happenings entirely escape the eye of the press, but recently such an event was unrecorded. London river, the river of the empire, enjoyed a double ebb and flow of its tide and no one said a word about it. Such a manifestation is certainly a curious one and not always explainable but before the Thames was embanked its vagaries in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries were pretty frequent, for in 1658 it ebbed and flowed twice in three hours, and in 1662 three times in four hours—a sergeant major's allowance which has never been surpassed.

Deceived the Eye.

A woman and her little daughter stopped to look at some live chickens that were running about in a drug store window on Huntington avenue. The mother remarked: "Those chickens were hatched in an incubator, dear."

"Why, mamma," said the child in surprise, "No one could tell them from real ones."
