Getting Peeled.

Wild and disheveled, watery of eye and trembling of limb, he burst into the dentist's consulting room and addressed the molar merchant in gasping tones:

"You give gas here?"

"Yes," replied the dentist.

"Does it put a man to sleep?"

"Of course."

"Nothing would wake him?"

"Nothing. But—"

"Wait a bit; you could break his jaw or black his eye without him feeling it?"

"My dear sir, of course, I—"

"It lasts about half a minute, doesn't it?"

"Yes."

With a war whoop of joy and relief the excited man threw off his coat and waistcoat.

"Now," he yelled, as he tugged at his shirt, "get yer gas engine ready. I want you to pull a porous plaster off my back."

Democracy Shaped by Forest and Frontier?

The appeal of the undiscovered is strong in America. For three centuries the fundamental process in its history was the westward movement, the discovery and occupation of the vast free spaces of the continent. We are the first generation of Americans who can look back upon that era as a historic movement now coming to its end. Other generations have been so much a part of it that they could hardly comprehend its significance. To them it seemed inevitable. The free land and the natural resources seemed practically inexhaustible. Nor were they aware of the fact that their most fundamental traits, their institutions, even their ideals were shaped by this interaction between the wilderness and themselves.

American democracy was born of no theorist's dream; it was not carried in the Sarah Constant to Virginia, nor in the Mayflower to Plymouth. It came out of the American forest, and it gained new strength each time it touched a new frontier. Not the Constitution, but free land and an abundance of natural resources open to a fit people, made the Democratic type of society in America for three centuries while it occupied its empire.—Fredrick Jackson Turner in "The Frontier in American History."

Research Has Shown Body's Danger Point

Which is the weakest external part of the human body? Some people would say the solar plexus; others, the region of the heart. Scientists are inquiring into this little-known subject, and already some important conclusions have been reached.

It has been found that the Adam's apple is man's most vulnerable external part. A slight blow is likely to affect it so seriously that permanent injury may result, the victim's breathing and swallowing being impaired. Even pressure of a thumb at this point can have injurious results. A hard blow may cause death.

One of the chief discoveries made in the course of this particular research is that the Japanese art of Jiu-Jitsu is based on expert knowledge of the danger points. For example, a blow with the edge of the hand above the temples or the ears may fracture the skull or cause concussion of the brain. Sudden pressure behind the ears is temporarily crippling in its effect. Blows on the nape of the neck are dangerous. Other points especially sensitive to pain and injury are the upper lip and the abdomen.

The Only Way

"On private business," said Charles to the office boy, as he handed in his card.

With a quaking heart Charles was ushered into the office of the successful man. Desperately he commented on the weather and other matters; then, realizing that his visit must soon draw to a close, he blurted out his business.

"Want to marry my daughter?" echoed the other, in amazement.

"Yes," answered Charles, swallowing a lump in his throat.

"But, my dear fellow, do you realize what it means? My daughter is accustomed to have whatever she wishes so far as money can procure it. You'd never support her."

Charles looked blank and fingered the knob of his cane agitatedly.

"Couldn't"—he gulped—"couldn't we chip in together?"

"No," answered the other, "couldn't we chip in together?"

"No," answered the other, "couldn't we chip in together?"

Concession Stand Makes Profit.

Receipts from the concession stand operated by the Keepers of the Den at Culp Creek during the filming of the battle and wreck scenes of Buster Keaton's picture, "The General," have not been computed but those in charge feel that a substantial profit has been made. The biggest day's business was on Friday, the day that the "Texas" was wrecked, but that on Sunday was almost as good.
