Are You "Toxic?"
 It Is Well, Then, to Learn the Importance of Good Elimination.

FUNCTIONAL inactivity of the kidneys permits a retention of waste poisons in the blood. Symptoms of this toxic condition are a dull, languid feeling, drowsy headaches and, sometimes, toxic backache and dizziness. That the kidneys are not functioning as they should is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many readers have learned the value of Doan's Pills, stimulant diuretic to the kidneys, in this condition. Users everywhere endorse Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

SOCIETY

The choir of the Christian church entertained Wednesday evening at the church in honor of Pastor and Mrs. Kenneth J. Husby. Church members and friends were guests and a musical program was given. The opening talk of welcome was given by D. T. Aubrey. Speeches were given by Pastor J. D. Chappelle, Pastor John A. Linn, Pastor Luncann P. Cameron, Pastor Kenneth J. Husby and Loren Harvey. Two readings were given by Millie-cent Burrows. The following program was given: Choir special; violin solo, Mrs. K. J. Husby; piano solo, Mrs. Leslie Hull; male quartet, Aubrey, Harvey, Chestnut and Hull; piano trio, Mrs. Hull, Mrs. Husby and Mrs. Sherman; piano duet, Mrs. Sherman and Miss Thea Wheeler; whistling solo, Kenneth J. Husby, with violin and piano accompaniment by Mrs. Husby and Mrs. Sherman, and a double mixed quartet. Mr. and Mrs. Gandy, friends of Pastor and Mrs. J. D. Chappelle, entertained with illustrated song paintings. Dainty refreshments were served in the church parlors by members of the choir. A large number attended.

A pre-season dance of Tanglefoot club was held Monday evening in Phillips hall with Mrs. Earl Garret, president of the club, and Mrs. C. C. Crumson, secretary-treasurer, as hostesses. Halloween decorations were used and large branches of autumn leaves from which peered forth ghosts and witches were placed about the hall. Jack-o-lanterns concealed the lights. Cider was served between dances. Plans were made for the regular series which will open the first Monday in November.

Mrs. Charles Adams was hostess Tuesday afternoon to the M. P. G. club. Mrs. Harold Axley was welcomed as a new member. Additional guests were Mrs. George Bjorset, Mrs. B. E. Job, Mrs. George Matthews, Mrs. Duncan P. Cameron, Mrs. C. E. Umphrey and Mrs. D. J. Scholl. Ferns and gay-colored autumn leaves were effective room decorations and an attractive bowl of marigolds was the table centerpiece. A two-course luncheon was served.

Mrs. H. B. Griggs was hostess Tuesday afternoon to the LaComus club. Mrs. M. P. Foster of Luncann, sister of Mrs. Griggs, and Mrs. S. V. Allison were additional guests. The afternoon was spent socially and with needlework. The rooms were tastefully decorated with autumn leaves and a banquet of marigolds was the table centerpiece. A delicious two-course luncheon was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Smith were hosts Monday evening at a 7 o'clock dinner preceding the Tanglefoot club dance. Covers were laid for fourteen: Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Short and Mrs. N. J. Nelson Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Albert Helliwell, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Lasswell, Mr. and Mrs. Karl K. Mills and the host and hostess. Marigolds were an attractive centerpiece.

Pastor and Mrs. John A. Linn of the Methodist church will be honor guests at a covered dish supper to be given at 6:15 Friday evening in the church parlors. The women of the church will serve. An invitation has been extended to all members and friends of the church.

The meeting of the Joker club to have been held Friday has been postponed for two weeks. Miss Esther Silsby will be hostess to the club at that time.

The Constellation club will be entertained this afternoon at Masonic hall with Mrs. T. C. Wheeler, Mrs. O. M. Baldwin and Mrs. O. L. Nichols as hostesses.

The Past Matrons club will be entertained Monday afternoon at Masonic hall. Mrs. O. L. Nichols and Mrs. Karl K. Mills will be hostesses.

Neighbors of Woodcraft Instituted. Grove Circle, number 875, Neighbors of Woodcraft, was formally instituted with a membership of 17 at a meeting Monday night in W. O. W. hall. Mrs. Stella Black, city of Salem, district deputy, was instituting officer and George Weber of this city was city organizer. The following officers were elected and installed: Rebecca Medley, past guardian; Maybelle Wilson, guardian neighbor; Hattie Lenn Sears, adviser; Myrtle Forbes, clerk; Mae Ostrander, banker; Eva Hatch, Elsie Curran and Benlah Rennie, managers; Clara Stevens, anglican; Helen Ostrander, attendant; Larkia Kerlee, inner sentinel; George Crowe, outer sentinel; Minnie Willis, captain of guards; Mildred Smith, flag bearer; Elva Churchill, musician; Naomi Wynne, press correspondent.

Meetings will be held the second and fourth Mondays of each month. King George has bought a half interest in a pet rabbit, reports London, than which there is no investment more certain to multiply itself.

Interesting Relics of London's Long History

Much of London's romantic history is told in gold, silver, ivory, oak, tapestry and silk in works of art the lively companies have preserved through troubled centuries. These were shown to the public at an exhibition in the Victoria and Albert museum. There were nearly 1,000 exhibits, dating from 1500 to the end of the Nineteenth century. Nothing in the exhibit delighted art experts more than the "girdlers' carpet," which has never been trodden on in its 300 years of existence. The arms of Robert Bell of Lahore, who presented it to the Girdlers' company in 1634, and the arms of the company are worked into the carpet's great expanse. Other exhibits included an eight-day table clock which belonged to Sir Isaac Newton, and a long eight-day clock in a wainscoting case, with wheels, pinions and frames of solid oak. The latter was the first clock made by the celebrated John Harrison. A grim dagger was said to be the one with which Wat Tyler was killed by the lord mayor of London. There were fine examples of charters and grants, dating from the Fifteenth century and even earlier. —Chicago Daily News.

Human Brain Seldom Put to Capacity Use

All our organs—our hearts, our lungs, our stomachs, and our brains—have been built to meet not only the daily routine of life, but emergencies which occur only at critical junctures. The heart on an occasion can rise to ten times its usual output; the lungs, if pressed, can nearly do as well. As for the stomach, the less said the better; modern civilization tends to throw an unfair burden on it. But as for the brain, the factor-of-safety law holds good; we have, and our ancestors had, about ten times more than ordinary occasions require; our superfluity was given us for emergency. It is just this emergency ration that the modern scholar has to depend on, and there are few, if any of us, who use this extra allowance to its full capacity. You may study to the utmost limit of your endurance, and by the mere act of study you may rest assured that you will do your brain no injury. Infinitely greater harm is done by misuse and disuse of the brain than by over-use.

Ideal Place to Build

A young married couple were looking for a site to build their first home. They came to a beautiful place and she said, "Let us locate here."
 "I want to go farther," replied the bridegroom.
 At length they came to a grander scene, and she exclaimed, "O, isn't this wonderful! Let us build here."
 "No," he answered, "I want to go on still farther."
 Finally they came to the most picturesque spot of all.
 "What do you think of this place?" he asked.
 "O, I am simply speechless," she gasped.
 "Then we will build here," he declared.—Laughter.

Moving Superstitions

There are many superstitions about moving, some of which are as follows:
 Never put the stove in first; to do so is sure to bring about many quarrels.
 Leave something behind you in the old home, but never, in any circumstances, take the old broom with you. Bringing eggs from the old home to the new likewise invites trouble.
 If anything except glassware is broken during the moving it means hard luck, but the breaking of glassware is propitious.
 To prevent homesickness, or to cure it, take coffee grounds from the old home to the new; another method is to strain coffee through a dishcloth.

Notoriety and Fame

Mandy was very fond of telling jokes to her neighbor, so one morning she decided to keep Rachel guessing this one.
 "Rachel, what is the difference between notoriety and fame?"
 "Laws, Mandy, I can't ever guess that one," said Rachel.
 "Well, a thousand dollars worth of roses will barely fill a room with perfume, but with a dollar's worth of fried onions you can scent up the whole town. Now, Rachel, that's the difference."

Hints to Correspondents

If you have a friend who doesn't answer your letter, you might do as a Topeka man did—write him a letter to this effect:
 If you are sick, "Sympathy."
 If you are engaged, "Congratulations."
 If you are married, "Happiness."
 If you are busy, "Pardon interruption."
 If none of these, why in the Q. S. X. X. Q. don't you write?—Capra's Weekly.

Not in Stock

"I want a copy of the magazine called Posterity," said the woman at the news stand.
 "No such animal, mum," assured the dealer.
 "Yes, there is too! My gentleman friend is a writing fellow and when I asked him if he wrote detective-stuff he said no, he writes for Posterity, and I want to see one of his things." —American Legion Monthly.

Running "Double-Header"

In a double-header train both push and pull are exerted by two locomotives. The bureau of standards says that a simple experiment to determine this is to take hold of an automobile or wagon with one hand and get a friend of yours to pull on your other hand.

Surprising Finds Made in Australian Caves

Astonishing finds have been made in the Wellington (Australia) caves, which include fossil remains which have been identified as those of the marsupial lion, an animal which combined the pouch of the kangaroo with the general characteristics of the African lion. Few specimens of the remains of this marsupial have been found in recent years. It has been described as one of the fiercest and most destructive of predatory beasts known to naturalists. Other new discoveries in these stalagmite caves have been classified as those of the diprotodon, an animal of the kangaroo type, but immensely greater in bulk than a full-grown rhinoceros. The fossils indicate an animal with an enormous head and a thick, strong neck, extremely large, chisel-shaped teeth and well-marked fingers and toes. The foot structure shows that these animals or their immediate ancestors were tree-climbers, the big toe being placed nearly at right angles to the others in order to enable it to obtain a grip as it mounted.

Bishop Has Honor as London's Patron Saint

One of the earliest bishops of London was St. Erkenwald, whose "festival" occurred recently. He was a Londoner born and bred, so it was only fitting that shortly after his death, which took place in 693, he should be acclaimed London's patron saint.
 St. Erkenwald restored the first St. Paul's cathedral, and was buried within its walls. In 1163 London was partly destroyed by a great fire which burned old London bridge and a portion of the cathedral, but stopped at his shrine. Pious folks professed to regard this as a miraculous intervention of the dead saint and from thence on his tomb became a place of pilgrimage.
 Many of them brought rare and costly gifts, so that in course of time Erkenwald's magnificent tomb was ablaze with precious stones. —Chicago Journal.

Really People's Bank

Napoleon I headed the list of stockholders, with 30 shares in his name, when the Bank of France was founded in February, 1800. It was constituted in the form of a joint stock company, with a capital of 30,000,000 francs, at that time about $8,000,000. The Bank of France differs from other central banks in that it deals with private individuals. It makes loans as small as $1 and the law requires it to do so. In an ordinary year before the World war the institution made 247,735 loans in sums not more than $2 and of the 8,900,000 separate bills discounted at Paris in one year, 4,304,000 were for amounts less than $20, says the Albany News. It is the bank of the people. Peasants and millionaires look upon it as their own.

Literary Love Adventures

A love adventure in story form is guaranteed to be complete in itself, to be over when it is finished and to leave behind it nothing but a pleasant memory in the reader's mind.
 In all these ways it differs from a love adventure in reality, concerning which no such safe guarantees can be offered. We try to live orderly lives, and while the love adventures of reality may upset the otherwise considered plans of a lifetime, the other kind leaves everything exactly as it was.

The heroine may swoon with ecstasy in your arms tonight; but she will not call you up on the telephone in the morning or write you passionate and compromising letters.

The Mind Awakened

Whatever arouses and awakens the mind, and causes it to forget itself and generously give its attention to matters outside itself—that is education. Whatever stirs it from its sleep or its indolence or its prejudice or its timidity or its indifference—that is education. Whatever "leads it out" into new fields and broader interests and opens up larger vistas—that is education. Whatever makes it keenly aware; whatever makes it conscious of its own powers and inspires it to use them; whatever encourages it or calls it to it to exercise them—that is education.—Woman's Home Companion.

Flashlight Photograph

A shiny pate, rather bald. Horn-rimmed spectacles. A small but heavy, black mustache above a pair of thick, red lips that grip the butt of an expensive cigar. A smooth but blue chin. Aquiline nose; pop-eyes with drooping lids; bloated cheeks. About five feet eight, heavy-set, plump. A tight-fitting dinner coat, several inches too long, with lapels around the ears. Trousers too short. A silk waistcoat with pearl buttons. Age: somewhere in the forties. Overconfident, aggressive. His name: Mr. Night-Life of New York.

Ancient Free Libraries

The free library is not an exclusively modern institution. There are proofs of the fact that Nineveh possessed a public library consisting of 30,000 distinct works on tablets of clay. There were Egyptian libraries 2,000 years before Christ, and at a later period the library at Alexandria was world-famous.
 It was in 1852 that the first free library in England was opened at Manchester. Dickens, Thackeray, Bulwer-Lytton and Monckton Milnes, afterward Lord Houghton, were among the speakers at the opening ceremony.

Kept It in the Soul

Every normal man has poetry in his soul, which is a better place for it than in a literary waste basket.—Toledo Blade.

Like Hats.

A Mr. Blank badly wanted to get in touch over the telephone with a certain member of a well-known club, who proved decidedly elusive. The girl operator at the club's private exchange, however, said she knew most of his haunts and would try to find him.

She rang up several places, but each time she drew a blank. Finally she had to ring up Mr. Blank at his office and report her lack of success.
 "That's all right, my dear," he replied gallantly. "You've done your best, and here's a kiss for you."

"Humph," retorted the girl. "Phone kisses remind me of straw hats."
 "How's that?" demanded Mr. Blank.
 "Why, they're not felt," was the reply.

Masonic Grand Lodge to Lay Cornerstone

New Baptist Meeting House

At 2 P. M.
 SUNDAY, OCTOBER 17

O. P. Coshaw, Past Grand Master of the Masonic Grand Lodge, and member of the supreme court, will be in charge. Grand Secretary Cheney and other high Masons will be present and assist in the work.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies by the Grand Lodge, the church will conduct a short service, as follows: Music by the church choirs, scripture reading by Rev. K. J. Husby, prayer by Rev. John A. Linn; "The Contribution of Baptists to Christian Life," by Rev. Duncan P. Cameron; "The Church as a Business Institution," by Rev. J. D. Chappelle.

The churches of the city and all fraternal orders are most cordially invited to attend these services. All people who are not members of any church, nor any fraternal order, and all children are urged to attend and will be accorded the warmest welcome.

Judge Coshaw Will Speak on Law Enforcement in the Evening at the Presbyterian Church to a Union Meeting of the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches. The Public Is Urged to Hear Him.

Money saving SKAGGS Cash stores

UNITED STORES

It Will Pay You, Too

One of the secrets of success of Skaggs Stores—and it is no secret at all—is the fact that we buy in almost unbelievable large quantities. Manufacturers are glad to quote us the lowest possible prices because we pay cash and—in many cases—take the entire output of their plants. In this way we effect enormous savings which, in part, account for the low prices you always find in our stores.

The same practices that have paid us will pay you. It is easy enough to figure out your needs ahead of time and buy a week or a month's supply while you are at it. On canned goods, for instance, you can make big savings by buying half-a-dozen, a dozen or more cans at a time. The same thing applies to all of the staple, non-perishable products—it pays to buy them in quantities. Try it and see.
