Library's Great Value Not Fully Realized

Our libraries can be made one of the most potent instruments of a creative citizenship, which aims at humanizing that grim industrialism, the grip of which tightens every day. Our policy must be to teach the community to find in the library a central laboratory of sweetness and light—a radiating power house of the spiritual and intellectual antidotes to the mechanistic materialism with which life today is saturated and by which it is degraded. We must insist that the library represents the literature of power, as distinct from the literature of knowledge and of information. Just as most men and women cannot understand maps without careful instruction, so most readers do not know really how to read. We have taught our people to decipher print; we have not yet taught them how to read. The universities tried to do that, but even if our ideals are realized the percentage of our congested democracy that will pass through a university must always be comparatively small. The library can do what the university cannot. Let us convince the public that it pays to read the literature of power, and it will pay to have that literature in abundance. —Principal Grant Robertson in a recent address.

Common Phrase Once

Had Distinct Meaning
"A name to conjure with" is a phrase more used than understood, as conjuring was not always the term for stage or parlor tricks of the present day. Originally conjuring stood for the art of the magician—the conjurer of the Dark Ages being really the same personage as the wizard. His conjuring really meant a very solemn compact or agreement, the word itself being taken from the Latin for an oath. Part of his ritual consisted in the then popular belief that he could summon up Satan or some other spirit by the saying of some word of power, such a word being generally mysterious-sounding, like "abracadabra." Occasionally the name of some departed great one, such as Solomon, was used. This name would then be known as sufficiently mighty to "conjure with," spirits hearing it being bound to obey. Today, we no longer believe in magic, and the magician of mystery and dread has turned into the harmless gentleman who produces rabbits from his hat at children's parties; but the old phrase still remains, and we refer to this and that great man as having a "name to conjure with."

The Motor Shovel

In unloading ore or coal from the holds of vessels on the Great Lakes there is always a certain amount of material in corners and between hatches that cannot be reached by the unloading buckets. The superintendent of one railway has designed a motor-driven scraper shovel that moves such material much faster than it can be moved by hand.

The machine carries a shovel that can be raised and dumped automatically, but whenever possible the ore or coal is pushed underneath the hatch openings, where the unloading buckets haul it out of the ship. The power-scraper shovel is said to do the work of 12 to 40 shovels, according to the type of boat, and to save from one to five hours' time in the unloading process.

Chinese Kitchens

Except for the fact that gas is the fuel instead of grass and wood, as in China, Chinese kitchens in American chop suey restaurants are closely fashioned after the patterns of the mud stoves in the Orient. There the stove is always broken before a family moves to a new abode. Here the kitchen range is built of tile, but still on the model of the old. The great shallow pans, the ladies and the oil pots, however, are strictly Chinese, and strange jars of water chestnuts, the cornucopia of a water plant imported from China, and other jars filled with slices of bamboo shoots are much in evidence among Chinese kitchens here as in the East.

Changes in Date Line

The so-called international date line was designed to remove certain objections to the meridian of 180 degrees west, the most important of which is that groups of islands lying about this meridian differ in date by a day, although only a few miles apart. Several forms have been suggested. These generally agree in retaining the meridian of 180 degrees in the mid-Pacific, with a bend in the north in order to make the Aleutian Islands and Alaska of the same time as America, and also in the south so as to bring certain of the South Sea Islands into a line with Australia and New Zealand.

Gold Market Wild Sees

The wildest scenes of commotion are to be witnessed on the Chinese exchange at Shanghai where brokers, dealing in gold bars, create more noise and display less regard for the physical and mental being of their neighbors than do even the brokers on the New York stock exchange, the New York curb or the Chicago Board of Trade, according to Geraldine Sartain, special correspondent to the Honolulu Star-Bulletin. There are 100 brokers on the gold bar exchange and these participate in a continuous scramble for positions around a table where the dealings are carried on.

See Life by Daylight

Too many young men who want to see life try to see it in the dark. If they would see what they can by daylight first, they might not be quite so curious as to what goes on at night. Darkness is the abode of evil.—Grit.

Youths Condemned to Seclusion in Boyhood

The boys of the Solomon Islands after a few years are taken from their mothers and they are not seen again by any woman until they reach manhood. In the meantime they are completely segregated and dire punishment is threatened to any woman who try to see them for any reason. The origin and reason for this custom is not satisfactorily explained. During this period the boys are used for bonito fishing and when they leave and return in the boats to that part of the island which is given over to them they are religiously covered with fiber mats, which completely hide them, for fear that some prying female might try to spy on them.

There is really no danger, for the women believe that the spirits will see them and deal out some terrible punishment. They are so fearful of this fate that they all take to their huts at the time of the departure and return of the boys. This fishing is looked upon as a sacred ceremony or duty.

When a certain period has elapsed there is a big feast and the boys are led to the village with a great ceremony and in pomp and state they are revealed to the women. After that the boys return to their residence in the village in common with other members of the tribe.—Exchange.

Boys "Put One Over" on Unsuspecting Dad

One Saturday a small boy asked his father for a shilling to buy a rabbit. On being satisfied that a hutch was being fixed up in which to keep the rabbit, and being, also, a believer in the civilizing influence on boys of keeping pets, dad gave him the shilling.

The following Saturday a second youngster came on the same errand, and obtained a shilling. It happened to be a large family, and not wanting to display any favoritism, dad eventually gave a shilling to each of his children for the purchase of a rabbit.

One day he went out to see all these rabbits, and was surprised to find only one. He inquired of his children what they had done with their shillings. Each declared that he or she had bought a rabbit.

"Well, where are they?" he demanded.

"Why, dad," explained one of the youngsters, "it was the same rabbit; we bought it from each other."

Reverted to Savagery

Bush negroes are descendants of Guiana's runaway slaves who in 1712-13 joined in the border raids made by French marauders and helped to plunder the estates abandoned by their owners when they fled for refuge to Paramaribo. They retreated to the bush, founded settlements of their own and, augmented by fresh arrivals, proceeded to harass the plantation owners. Efforts were made to subdue them, but without success. In 1786, after 50 years of fighting, these self-emancipated marauders finally signed a treaty of peace, whereby they were given their liberty and certain territory in the colony was assigned to them. Today they live like their ancestors in Africa, unclothed except for a loin cloth, dwelling in palm-leaf huts and apparently in as savage a state as they were 200 years ago.—Travel Magazine.

Fish Age Facts

How long do fish live? Maj. R. S. Fowler, in a lecture before the London Zoological society, gave some interesting data on a special study he has conducted on this subject.

An electric eel in the London zoo, it was reported, lived twelve years. A European catfish in the private aquarium of the duke of Bedford is fifty years old and shows little indication of weakness.

Other fish age figures given by Major Fowler, says a writer in Scientific Magazine, were: Carp, thirteen years; goldfish, twelve years; herring, four years; salmon, three years; bull frog, fifteen years; tree frog, fourteen years; female Spanish newt, eighteen years; and giant salamander, fifty-two years.

Nutmeg Production

The nutmeg is the pit or kernel of a fruit which, when ripe, looks something like a small peach. The pulp of this fruit is quite unpleasant to the taste. Inside the pulp is a red flesh known as mace—one of the most popular spices known to modern cookery. When you taste a dish flavored with mace you will know that you are eating what was once the soft red covering of a nutmeg. Nutmeg trees properly located and well cared for are remarkably prolific. In one year a single tree has been known to produce more than 2,000 nutmegs. The nutmeg blossom is white, bell shaped, and as fragrant as it is beautiful.

Grand Instrument

It is to be hoped that we shall always have a few artists in words; otherwise we shall soon have an English language which will be as inferior to the English of the best writers as the Greek of Lucian is to the Greek of Plato. We have a glorious language, which, in the hands of Milton or Burke, is one of the grandest instruments of human speech; but, like everything else, it needs keeping in repair, especially in a bustling age when everyone reads and writes in a hurry.—William Ralph Inge, in "Lay Thoughts of a Dean."

Majority and Minority

Though the will of the majority is in all cases to prevail, that will, to be rightful, must be reasonable; the minority possess their equal rights, which equal laws must protect.—Thomas Jefferson.

Mothers' Club Favors Bible School. The Mothers' club at a recent meeting went on record as favoring the week-day religious school plan which is being discussed here.
