None Claim Deserted Three Mast Derelict

Mystery Surrounds Desertion of Marion C. Douglas, Suspected Run Runner.

(By United Press.) San Diego, Cal., Dec. 6.—(Special.)—The three-masted wind-jammer Marion C. Douglas, suspected run runner, found as a near-derelect off the Mexican coast in September and towed to San Diego for identification, is holding its secrets better than it did its liquor.

A secret door, a bullet hole, a bible with certain passages underscored and the scrawled names "Mary" and "Hazel," add untold mystery to the craft, which bore no ship's papers when found.

The government has advertised in vain for its owners to "come and get it." If unclaimed the vessel will be sold at auction.

A deputy constable who is stationed aboard the craft, with plenty of time and little to do, has rummaged every nook and cranny for a clue to the fate which befell the old windjammer and her crew. He has found:

The names "Mary-267" and "Hazel-264" scrawled in a heavy hand inside an old adventure-story magazine.

A bible with the pages of the book of Acts giving worn evidence of much reading. A verse was underscored reading: "He suffereth shipwreck," and another: "And Paul said, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day."

A barrel of meat from a San Diego concern, bread wrappers from Westminster, B. C., supply cans purchased in Vancouver, B. C., a shoe horn from St. Johns, N. B., a British government seal stamped at Halifax, cooking utensils from India, and Australian and Argentine publications.

Safer. "Girls were harder to kiss in your day, weren't they, grandpa?" "Mebbe, mebbe," ventured the old gentleman, "but it wasn't so blame dangerous. The old parlor sofa wouldn't smush into a tree about that time."

High Water Overturms Buster's Engine

The Civil war locomotive, used in making the burning trestle scene in Buster Keaton's new picture, "The General," has been washed up and turned over by the recent high water in Row river, according to George E. Potter, storekeeper at Culp Creek, near where the scene was filmed. The engine crashed through a burning trestle into the river in the scene which is one of the biggest of the forthcoming picture. Culp Creek was the scene of several thousand persons last summer when the big scene was filmed.

It is reported that the picture soon will be ready to be released and an effort is being made to have "The General" shown here first.
