

New Year Sunday

at the Presbyterian Church

The Presbyterian Church Wishes
You All a Very Happy New Year

10 a. m. Sunday school. Start the year by enrolling as a member. We have a staff of highly competent teachers. Organized classes for all. You will enjoy our orchestra. John W. Craig, superintendent.

11 a. m. Morning worship. By special request the choir will repeat the Christmas music. The minister will give a New Year message, "The Fascination of the Unknown," from the text "Ye have not passed this way before."

6:30. Endeavor meeting.

7:30. Evening service. The Odd Fellows and Rebekahs of the city are to be special guests at this service. It was planned that this service would be the culmination in the dedication services of the new temple, but in as much as the dedication is postponed it was thought best to go ahead with the evening meeting. Rev. Cameron will speak on "The Romance of Religion, or the Gospel of the Second Mile." The choir will render two special anthems for this service. Do not be absent. Commence the year aright by being twice at the house of God.

SENATOR FLAYS POLICY OF POISONING ALCOHOL

(By United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—(Special.)—Deaths caused from drinking impure liquor during the holiday season today stirred a congressional storm against the government policy of putting poison in alcohol.

With the intention of prohibiting the use of poisons by law, Senator Edwards of New Jersey sent a letter to Lincoln Andrews, federal director of prohibition enforcement, asking if congress had authorized the use of wood alcohol and other poisons in making commercial alcohol undrinkable. Senator Edwards characterized the practice as legalized murder.

Many persons died, a number were made blind and others were seriously ill as result of drinking illicit liquor during the recent holidays. It is claimed that poisoned alcohol caused several of the deaths.

R. L. S. was writing hard one morning when the door was pushed open and a much excited lady

"Oh, Mr. Stevenson!" she exclaimed. "I won't really keep you long; but I do want you to help me out of a difficulty. I have to take a stall at a bazaar, and there is not nearly enough material to sell. Somebody told me the other day that you are getting so celebrated that even a scrap of your handwriting would bring in quite a lot of money. Please give me one or two of your manuscripts. We would put them up to auction!"

When the lady at last puffed for breath, her victim replied that it was not in his power to oblige her; he had no suitable contribution to offer for her bazaar; nothing whatever that would be worthy of such a fate.

"Oh, Mr. Stevenson, don't say that!" she replied with kindly condescension. "Any of your stories would do nicely. My friend told me so; she said anything of yours would sell. Please don't disappoint us! It doesn't really matter how stupid it is, or how badly written!"

How this lady was finally deported I do not remember to have heard. But she at least paid her footing by supplying R. L. S. with one of his best anecdotes, one that he related with sheer delight.—("H. L. S. and His Sine Qua Non." By "The Gamekeeper.")

Change in Popularity of Slang Continuous

The expression "Quo" was flung frequently in the year 1826 at impatient persons who asked you questions that you preferred not to answer. The next really formidable success was, "What a shocking bad hat!" which soon blossomed into a game almost as popular as and even more strenuous than the renowned "Beaver!"

Wearers of worn and tattered headpieces were in constant danger of having the offending object snatched from their heads and hurled into the gutter by enthusiastic athletes. The year 1835 is agreed upon by most scholars as the time at which "Does your mother know you're out?" first convulsed a weary world. Five more years of fasting and prayer were necessary before "Do you see any green in my eye?" made its bow. The closing decades of the Nineteenth century were more prolific and they may be held responsible for "I would I were with Nancy," "Whoa, Emma, mind the paint," "Not today, baker," "Not in these trousers," "Where did you get that hat?" and "Let 'em all come."—From T. P.'s and Cassell's Weekly, London.

Dry Flowers in Sand

Lovers of flowers in their natural state are afforded a way of drying out blossoms in sand instead of pressing them, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The method requires dishes sufficiently deep so that the blossoms can be covered to a depth of at least an inch. While scouring sand will do. It should be laid half an inch deep in the dish. The flowers placed stem downward in the layer and then sprinkled over until all the petals and the entire blossom are fully covered. The flowers should be held firmly, as this insures a complete dusting. When covered they are placed in their dish in a warm, dry place. In about a week some of the blooms will be thoroughly dried, but others may require much longer. By this method the blossoms are said to retain their natural shapes and colors even for years.

Ancient Hymns Discovered

Texts that were sung to music are among the discoveries recently made in the ruins of Ur, where the palaces and temples of Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Assyrians, stood.

Tombs under the ruins of dwelling houses were discovered, dating from the period of the Larsa kings, about 2000 B. C., large, solidly constructed in burnt brick. There was found against the wall of the room a collection of nearly sixty clay tablets which had obviously been stored in a jar, whose fragments lay with them. They were fairly large and unusually well preserved and bore religious texts and hymns in honor of the moon god, written out in the time of Rim-Sin, king of Larsa, twenty-one centuries before Christ. These are the most important tablets which excavations have yet brought to light.—Musical America.

The Vital Spark

Are not the poets themselves to blame that poetry is not more widely read? Beautiful, wandering, aimless lines soon fade without an idea. Is satire—impudent, personal, biting—a genuine poetic mood? Are beautifully trimmed and hedged gardens the best inspiration for poetizing human nature? Are the literary teas of social climbers the best laboratories for poetizing human nature? And yet an inconsequential leaf in the air may seem vital and important to the poet. It is vital and important.—Marie Luhrs, in Poetry.

Teutonic Race

The Teutonic peoples comprise those populations of Europe speaking the Teutonic languages and including the English-speaking people of the British Isles, the German-speaking people in Germany, Austria, Hungary and Switzerland, the Flemish of Belgium, the Scandinavians of Sweden and Norway, and practically all the inhabitants of Holland and Denmark. Outside of Europe it includes those peoples of the above-mentioned countries that have emigrated to Africa, America, Australasia, etc.

Creatures of Mystery in Unexplored China

Strange creatures, said to have been found in the south of China, are causing a great deal of scientific curiosity.

The most amazing of these discoveries deals with a race of "dog-faced" people. This tribe is said to live far in the interior. They have thick hair all over their bodies, live in trees, and are entirely savage.

There have been reports also of a blue tiger, a creature which is against all known laws of zoology. This beast is not striped like the ordinary tiger, but has a bluish fur resembling the color of coarse dungaree. During one month, a scientist reported, this specimen killed and ate 60 people. The same explorer, Doctor Caldwell, also discovered a badger as big as a bear, and shot a serow, a very rare animal which is a cross between a goat and an antelope.

All these reports lend color to the theory held by many scientific men that in southern China there are many strange, primitive men and animals to be discovered. Life in this region today is supposed to be very like that in prehistoric times, and many "prehistoric" animals may be still existing. The men, too, have probably remained almost unchanged.

For years the Chinese themselves have believed that dragons and flying serpents exist in their country. They have been scoffed at as having vivid imaginations, but may it not be a fact that these creatures still lurk in the hinterland where white men have rarely penetrated?

Not Much Doubt as to Where She Stood

Attorney W. B. Ward tells of the utterance of a client he once had in Kansas City that he regarded as a classic in finally. The client was of ebony hue and was asking to be divorced from what she termed the "most noncountent, triflingest man that breathed."

Judge Birney figured such exclamation indicated another suitor somewhere in the background. By clever questioning he attempted to wring from the irate witness that there was another man in the case, but she stoutly denied such inference and continued with the denunciation of the hapless spouse. After an hour the court decided the plaintiff had earned her decree and so indicated, but in passing judgment he observed verbally that the plaintiff would in all probability be married again within a month. Disregarding formality and even with contempt the woman took her stand in front of the bench and fixing Judge Birney with her eyes she exclaimed:

"Judge, the man I'd marry again ain't been born yet and furthermore his mother's dead."

St. Swifth's Day

July 15 is St. Swifth's day. According to an old superstition, if it rains on St. Swifth's day it will rain on the forty succeeding days. The legend says that St. Swifth, bishop of Winchester, who died in 802, desired to be buried in the churchyard in order that "the sweet rain of heaven might fall upon his grave." When he was canonized the monks thought they would honor St. Swifth by removing his body into the choir, and they set July 15 as the day for the ceremony. But it rained on that day and continued to rain every succeeding day for forty days, which the monks interpreted as disapproval of their project by the saints, and accordingly abandoned it. The story is mythical, at least in part, for St. Swifth was never actually canonized by the church.

Meat Consumption

Foreigners as a rule consume larger quantities and more varieties of meats than do Americans. This is particularly true of Germans, Poles, Hungarians and Bohemians. Surveys made show that home owners and tenants of large apartments purchase meats in considerable quantity and of wide variety. Tenants of small apartments purchase small quantities and usually buy steaks and chops. Working-class people buy large quantities and many varieties of meats. Office workers consume relatively small quantities and few varieties. Business and professional classes consume high-grade meats.

Poisons in History

Nearly every race in the world, and that includes untutored savages, have their pet poisons, says Girard in the Philadelphia Inquirer. Not for nothing was Cupid displayed aiming an arrow. The poisoned arrow has figured in human history for thousands of years. Different races use different poisons. Pliny wrote that the Gauls used a mixture of decayed animal matter and toadstools to put death at the point of their arrows. In some places in Africa today the death penalty is inflicted via a bowl of deadly liquid.

Insect Marvel

A water spider is one of the marvels of creation. It is to be found in every ditch or stagnant pool. It must breathe the air to live, yet it is born under water, and passes its life either on or beneath it. It can run as easily upon the surface of the water as an ordinary creature does on land. When it lives below the surface it is seen to be glistening with bubbles. The water spider is covered with little bristles, and these carry the air down with it into the water. The skin of the spider is consequently never wet.

CASE AGAINST AIMEE MAY BE DISMISSED

(By United Press.)

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 27.—(Special.)—The case against Aimee Semple McPherson is near collapse today and may be dismissed before night, according to information from the district attorney's office. District Attorney Keyes has called the grand jury in special session to consider charges of perjury against Mrs. Loreaine Wiseman-Sielaff, star witness for the prosecution in the preliminary hearing, who, it is said, has flatly declared she committed perjury on the stand.

If perjury charges against Mrs. Wiseman-Sielaff are sustained, the case against Mrs. McPherson will be dismissed. Announcement from the district attorney's office stated that investigators had been given a new version implicating one of the evangelist's former personal attorneys. Mrs. Wiseman-Sielaff is known as the hoax woman of the Carmel angle of the case against Mrs. McPherson and in the preliminary hearing declared she had been hired by the evangelist to provide a woman to pose as the companion of Kenneth G. Orniston, with whom, the prosecution alleged, the evangelist had lived in a cottage at Carmel while supposed to be in the hands of kidnapers.
