NEW METHOD TO KEEP FRUITS FRESH FOUND

PORTERVILLE, Cal., Feb. 21.—(United Press.)—Discovery of a method by which peaches or other fruits, quick to decay, may be preserved for months in an almost perfect state, has been made by a farmer near here. The farmer, C. A. Witt, has brought a ripe Velvet cling peach to the local chamber of commerce, which he stored in a combination of sawdust and ground cork. The fruit appeared to be in as good condition as the day it was picked, last summer.

Life's End Sometimes Welcomed as Friend

I went in where he sat groaning beside his fire on a warm spring day, and I said: "What makes you do that, grandfather?"

"Do what?" "Groan like that?" "Groan!" he said. "When did I groan?"

"Just now. For that matter, you do it dozens of times a day." "No!" he said, and he seemed surprised. "Do I? I think you must be mistaken." Then he looked dreamily at his fire for a moment, seeming to forget both me and my question. "Oh, ho, ho, ho, ha, hum!" he said.

"There! You did it just then, grandfather. Didn't you know it?" "I believe I did groan then," he said. "Perhaps you're right. Yes, I suppose you must be."

"Don't you feel well?" "Well? Yes, I'm not ill." "Then why do you groan so often?"

"It must be," he answered thoughtfully. "It must be because I'm not dead."

That startled me. Good gracious! I cried. "You don't want to die, do you?"

I might as well have been shocked by a starving man's wanting food. My grandfather was a gentle, mannered soul; but I think he may have been tempted to call me an idiot. "Don't I thought?" he said testily.

"What do you imagine I want to stay like this for?" Eyes almost useless, teeth gone, hearing bad, legs bad, back bent, fingers too warped and shaky to serve me—and all of me useless to anyone, to myself most of all. "Don't want to die!" What on earth do you mean?"—From "The Olden Age" by Booth Tarkington.

Beautiful Bird, but Has Bad Reputation

Mexico has contributed a number of striking species of birds to the lower Rio Grande valley of Texas, but none more handsome, more mischievous or more provocative of interest than the large, green, yellow, blue and black member of the crow-jay family, says Nature Magazine. He is nearly a foot in length, his upper parts are a lovely blue-green; the crown of the head and the hind-neck, a deep, rich blue. The forehead is almost white, and the chin, throat, chest and eye-region, black. The shoulders, rump and upper tail are yellowish green, the four middle feathers being a darker, brighter green, while the outer ones are yellow. He is an inveterate robber of the nests of wild birds as well as those of domestic fowls.

Blackened Character

The city of Pueblo, Colo., is, on account of its smelting and refining works, one of the smokiest cities in the world. One winter a traveler stepped from a train at Denver, and walking up to a policeman, asked him the way to a certain hotel. The officer cast a scornful eye on the man, who was covered with soot and grime, so that he looked like a chimney sweep, and ironically inquired of the stranger if he were a coal miner.

"No," said the dirty one. "I am not a coal miner nor a charcoal burner. Neither am I in the coal business. More than that I am not a negro minstrel."

"What are you?" asked the policeman. "Lean down," said the man, "and I will whisper to you. I am a millionaire in sore distress. I have been through a snowstorm in Pueblo."

Billiards on Horseback

One of the novelties introduced in the game of billiards was the playing of a game on horseback by the members of the Paris Jockey club in 1838. The horses were taken up a flight of stairs to the billiard room with great difficulty. The game was for 12 points up and was finished in 20 minutes.

The origin of the game of billiards is rather hazy. Too great profecy at billiards even today is said by many to be a sign of a mispent youth, and it was perhaps this idea that kept our forefathers so quiet upon the subject, says a writer in Tit-Bits. That it existed centuries ago is indicated by a passage in Shakespeare's "Cleopatra," in which she invites Charmion to play billiards with her.

Prophetic Plant

A plant which is said to be able to predict earthquakes and volcanic eruptions bears the scientific name of Abrus precatorius. It is a native of Cuba, has no flowers, and consists of a long stalk from which branch numerous twigs containing rows of delicate looking leaves. The leaves frequently change color or close, while the twigs bend themselves into curious positions.

This plant is highly sensitive to electric and magnetic influences, and by being able to interpret the movements of the plant in response to electric currents the scientist is enabled to predict great convulsions of nature.

Slitting Parrot's Tongue

It is a widespread superstition that to enable a parrot to talk (in imitation of human speech) it is necessary to slit the tongue, says Alexander Wetmore in the Scientific Magazine. "This, however, has no foundation in fact, and when practiced only inflicts an unnecessary cruelty. Birds make sounds in a little organ known as the syrinx at the lower end of the trachea or windpipe, and as the tongue has little to do with the process, slitting it has no connection whatever with the ability to imitate sounds."

FIRST SHOPPING NEWS STOPPED AFTER 3 YEARS

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 21.—(United Press.)—The New Haven Shopping News, conducted by a number of local merchants, will be discontinued late this month, the United Press learned today.

The Shopping News, an eight page publication consisting entirely of advertising, was organized here about three years ago and was among the first of nearly two score that have been started throughout the United States. It is to be discontinued, according to an official of the Edward Malley company, local department store, because of the lack of continuous support from a number of merchants.

The News had been distributed free every week to stimulate the week end bargain trade, and claimed a circulation of 35,000. A battle of several years' standing between department stores and two afternoon papers over alleged high advertising rates was ended here recently when the stores accepted the rates and inserted their advertising.

Asked whether that incident had any bearing on the discontinuance of Shopping News, the Malley official said that any report to that effect was "entirely erroneous."

Girl Seeks Chauffeur Job. CHARLOTTE, N. C., Feb. 21.—(United Press.)—Miss Bennie May Fesperman, daughter of the Mecklenburg county chief of police, has gone in for chauffeur.

The 20 year old miss, "because of idle time" she explained, has advertised for a job as chauffeur.

Miss Fesperman is the first woman in North Carolina to aspire for the place of "James."

Save Yourself Inconvenience By Anticipating Your Needs in Printing

You are likely to say that you are too busy to check up on your printing once in a while, that you are too busy with business. The printer has the same trouble and, while he will exert every effort to get out immediately the rush order (which could just as well have been ordered several days before), sometimes to do so is a physical impossibility.

Of course it is a favor to the printer to have copy in his hands several days before a job of printing is needed, but it is at the same time good business for the person wanting the printing, for he has given the printer time to get him out a good job and time enough so that it can be delivered before the last sheet of the letter head, statement, or whatever it happens to be, has been used. The printer and the buyer of printing can profitably work together in the manner suggested.
