LITTLE TOTS NO MORE.

Fifteen years ago he or she was a little tot lisping childish words, giving expression to childish ideas, and the height of his or her ambition was to be snuggled in mother's or daddy's arms.

He or she had all of life ahead and had never given a thought as to what part he or she would play in it, had made no preparations for that part.

Since that happy day the years have been swiftly fleeting. Rompers and baby clothes soon gave way to the dress or suit that had been prepared for the first day at school. With the change from year to year in apparel came development of ideas, and the head that once snuggled in mother's neck had thought for other things—for arithmetic, spelling, reading, grammar, algebra, geometry, Latin, English and, perchance, for snuggling on some other neck.

The tiny feet that once tracked mother's floor with mud have grown and the difficulty of guiding them aright is greater than ever before.

The ears that once listened so attentively to a parent's advice are attuned to many other things, some of them less worth while.

The child that fifteen years ago was nothing but a joy has caused many gray hairs in mother's head and even dad may be able to recount some sleepless nights.

But this week all that is forgot by child and parent, for this is graduation time, and there is pride on the part of parents and the child probably feels a pardonable exuberance over his or her own accomplishments, for exams will soon be behind and the world will be ahead waiting to be conquered.

And, no doubt, the child with good reason believes that this will be easy, for he is not better equipped than ever his parents were and doesn't the graduating generation have greater opportunities than any preceding generation ever had, and isn't the graduating generation naturally a trifle smarter than any generation that ever graduated before? If the graduating generation doesn't think this, which we are willing, for this week at least, to grant to be true, it is different from any graduating generation that has gone before.

Those of us who have never had the opportunity to graduate from anything, who have never enjoyed the pleasure of being a "piece de resistance" at a commencement program, can not know all the feelings and thoughts of the graduating generation, but our advice to that generation is to go the limit in enjoying their peculiar position during commencement week for never again will there be another period in life exactly like it. We wish we could say that there is no disillusionment ahead, we wish we could assure them that the world will greet them with a cordial smile and guard them against hardship in their early struggles to gain a foothold.

But perhaps it is best that we can give no such assurance, however sweetly it might fall upon youthful ears, for it is meeting obstacles and setbacks that is going to give the graduates opportunity to make use of that never-say-die spirit of youth, that is going to give them opportunity to put to the test and more fully develop the stamina developed under the athletic coach, that is going to give them the opportunity to exercise the nimbleness of wit developed in debate, that is going to give them the opportunity to prove that they were worthy of the efforts that have been made to prepare them for what is before them, that is going to make them fully

Our best wishes are with the graduating classes here and everywhere and we trust that we may have the opportunity to give some of them a boost on the upward grade, that we may have some part in assisting some one of them to blossom into the fullness of a splendid manhood or womanhood with a full sense of the responsibilities of one who has accepted so much from the government which it is now up to the graduating generation to perpetuate, support and maintain in its fullest splendor.

Yep, you've guessed it, we have another youngster graduating from high school this year.

H. W. Titus, until recently a resident of Cottage Grove, is a candidate for school director in Eugene. Cottage Grove probably has furnished more candidates for county offices and other offices than all the rest of the county put together, for which reason the candidacy of Titus so soon after his arrival in Eugene should be no surprise. However, his late residence here should not be held against him, for he is a native of Eugene and has spent most of his life there, where his parents and grandparents have been prominent residents. It was his great grandfather that gave Cottage Grove its name when he was the first postmaster for this section of country in a cottage in a little oak grove near the present city of Creswell. Regardless of where Titus was born, or where he has lived, or who his progenitors were, it's a cinch that Eugene would make no mistake in putting him on the school board.

We look forward to mansions in the sky—but if things are crowded we will be satisfied with a back bedroom.

It's comparatively easy to take a census today. Just count the service stations and divide by two.—Eugene Register.
