'The Gorilla Hunt' is Film of African Jungles

Cannibals, pygmies with poison arrows, big game animals of Africa and huge ape-men will provide the thrills in "The Gorilla Hunt," a picture that took two years to film in the African jungles, which will be shown Tuesday and Wednesday at the Arcade. Ben Burbridge, who is considered the greatest American hunter since Roosevelt, headed the party that filmed the picture.

"The Gorilla Hunt" is interesting not only as a contribution to contemporary science but also as a thrilling drama of big game shooting in the dense jungles of the unknown Congo country. Burbridge has secured in this film the only motion pictures ever taken of the gigantic ape-men of Africa.

To save his life he was obliged to kill several of the "missing links" and one proved to be the largest specimen ever reported. It stood six feet high and weighed 450 pounds. Stuffed and mounted it is now one of the most interesting exhibits in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

Many fascinating tribal dances are shown and these prove that the Charleston steps originated in the African jungle. Many of the wildest steps performed by the tribesmen have not yet reached civilization.

He showed various mosses, flowers and plants which are studied in the camps. Ten Y. M. C. A. boys attended the service and a quartet sang several numbers.

At the forenoon service D. A. MacLeod, former pastor of this church, spoke on "I Am Not Ashamed of the Gospel," in which he gave reminiscences of his service as pastor here.

Cottage Grove Wins From Wendling
Cottage Grove defeated Wendling 7 to 5 in a hard fought baseball game played Sunday afternoon on Delbert Kelly field. A fair sized crowd attended. The score was tied at 5 to 5 up to the eighth inning when the locals in their half staged a rally and shoved over two runs.

The locals opened a heavy barrage of base hits in the opening inning, scoring five runs. Wendling scored once in the first, twice in the second and tied the count in the third. Both battled on even terms until the locals sewed up the game with their timely scores in the last of the eighth.

A Wendling player knocked a home run.
