LACK OF REFINEMENT NOT COLLEGIATE.

We believe we are going to like the new editor of the Eugene Guard because he likes so many things that we do, and dislikes some of the things that we dislike. In a recent editorial, under the heading, "Please Don't, Ladies," he said:

"She was a dainty young thing but she came clumping and clacking into the editorial sanctum like a grand dame of eighty. We observed her with some concern, anxious to know the nature of the injury which could cause such infirmity. Checks in which health flamed and eyes in which there was joy with no trace of suffering belied the possibility of any tragic deformity. She clumped out and then she clumped in again. We were moved to ask with all possible politeness under the circumstances why on earth she didn't walk like a human being if not like a lady. And we were blithely informed that clumping is collegiate, and oh, so fashionable, very. Now we would not be Victorian. We do not sigh for the days when young ladies were schooled in a certain grace of carriage and bearing. But we hate clumping. It wears out nerves and good shoe leather. Please don't, ladies!"

We opine that this sweet and noisy young thing, who said that clumping is collegiate expressed in that one sentence about all she knows about why she went to college, and her answer shows that she has no idea whatever of what college is for.

Clumping and clacking are not collegiate, and all the clacking and clumping young things in the world can not make us believe that they are, but it may be true, and probably is true, that all that a lot of our young folk get out of college is expressed in this young thing's reply to the editor, therefore they brand such unrefinement as collegiate.

We would not be a Victorian any more than the editor of the Guard, but it is not necessary to be Victorian to say that clacking and clumping are unrefined and unladylike, that they irritate those with a sense of refinement and do no good to those who believe that to be a necessary part of college athletics.

It is not necessary even to go to college to learn that a girl or a woman entering an office or a home should do so quietly, not go in a manner to indicate that she wishes to jar the building from its foundations; and should make her request to see the editor in a subdued, dignified and courteous manner. And the same applies to boys and men.

We may be woefully out of date in some of our ideas, but we are certain that we are not out of date in saying that youngsters will make greater headway in the world when they learn to approach those from whom they wish to ask favors in a quiet, courteous, deferential way; they will be more welcome wherever they go if they eschew the cull in public and in the home, if they make their presence unobtrusive, if they give others a chance to be heard, if they think of the nerves and the wishes of others with whom they come in contact.

A healthy girl, even an athletic girl, is pleasant to the eye, and she need not be denied all the exercise she needs; she need not be denied the opportunity to make all the noise she wishes to, but there is a place for clacking-and-boisterous outbursts, and it is equally true that refinement, courtesy, dignity and an easy, pleasant bearing in the office and the home, with the consideration for others that youngsters owe their elders are not incompatible with robust health in girl or boy.

APPRECIATION OF BOB SAWYER.

Ed Brodie, than whom there is none in the state better acquainted with public men and their qualifications for office, makes a suggestion in his Oregon City Enterprise which The Sentinel desires to second, as follows:

"One of these days some governor of Oregon, with an appreciation of the broad vision and talents of Bob Sawyer, is going to ask him to serve on the state highway commission, a place for which he is particularly fitted. He has had more to do with the promotion of the magnificent state highway system of central Oregon than any other one man. For years he has labored early and late, eagerly and faithfully for the completion of the two hundred and eighty-six mile ribbon of macadam leading from a point eight miles east of The Dalles to Klamath Falls, and connecting at three distinct points with western Oregon. He no longer is a mere voice crying in the wilderness for decent roads, for his section of the state has them, due largely to his own indefatigable efforts and untiring energy. The time will come when that vast district which we refer to in general terms as central Oregon will obtain adequate representation on the important commission entrusted with the expenditure of the millions that we spend annually in the construction and maintenance of primary roads."

Bob Sawyer, for the information of the few who do not know, is editor of the Bend Bulletin and for several years has been county judge of Deschutes county.

The textile manufacturers, in their campaign to lengthen the feminine skirt, make the assertion that 90 per cent of the legs on exhibition are not worth looking at. Cottage Grove has the remaining 10 per cent.

A boy has died of lockjaw super-induced by a bee sting. He probably was garrulous enough at the moment of contact.

We sometimes admire a man's stinginess when we want to borrow money—and he lets us have it.

Riches have wings, but poverty gets to you quicker.

NEWS AND EDITORIALS.

(Corvallis Gazette-Times.) In stating its policies for the benefit of the people of Lane county, the Eugene Guard makes the assertion that all of its opinions will be found in the editorial columns where they belong and never in the news columns. That may not seem to amount to much to the average reader, but it is a matter of considerable importance.

It was long the custom of small or papers, especially in the weekly field, to spread opinions all over the paper. News stories were saturated with them. When it was too obviously partisan, a feature story was invented. Country weeklies in many places still editorialize in the news columns. An address is referred to as "excellent" or "rotten" or however the reporter feels about it. A sermon is "constructive" or "highly appreciated" or something descriptive. The bride is "beautiful" and "a good time was had by all."

There is some excuse for this sort of thing on the small town weekly where the editor is also reporter, news editor, business manager and typesetter, but there is never any excuse for it, nor is it ever justified otherwise.

Of recent years the large dailies have been guilty of mauling public opinion thru their news columns unduly, unfairly and unscrupulously. Under the guise of "special correspondence," the news story is colored and biased and twisted by innuendo, opinion and often by rank misstatements. They can get nothing biased from the Associated Press, so they resort to special correspondents. The average reader takes his news for granted. It must be true or the paper wouldn't print it as news. The average reader does not take the editorial page for granted. He knows that the statements therein are merely the opinions of the editor. He is therefore not deceived.

LIGHTS OF FRATERNALISM DISCUSSED BY CAMERON

Members of the Eagles lodge were guests at the service last evening at the Presbyterian church. N. J. Nelson Jr. sang two numbers, "The Trumpeter" and "Mother McCree," being accompanied by his daughter Maxine, and Pastor Cameron delivered an address based upon the principles enunciated by the Eagles and other fraternities. He said that all fraternities look forward to the golden age when the world shall be the parliament of man and the federation of the world. World courts and meetings of all the great nations of the world that have followed the great world are moves in this direction, he said. The three four great lights of the Eagles fraternity, liberty, truth, justice and equality, were discussed in detail.

Dixie Quartet to Sing Tonight. A program of negro folk songs and spirituals, classical and humorous vocal numbers and instrumental selections will be featured by the Dixie Jubilee quartet tonight at the high school auditorium. In their appearance before the high school student body last year the quartet won high praise from the audience.

The four are versatile artists and each plays several instruments. One of the quartet is a cartoonist whose chalk talks have been classed among the best. E. F. Bennette, baritone, has made a hobby of banjo playing and is considered an artist in that line. S. K. Stewart, bass, is the piano soloist and also plays the banjo and ukulele.

"I don't have to advertise for everyone knows who I am, where I am, and what I sell," will never make any more than a living. The average shopper does not care who a merchant is, where he is, or what he sells. But he does care about information as to cost of what he wants without wasting steps. So advertise.—Beaverton Review.

Glaring Headlights Are Oregon Traffic Menace

"The most dangerous situation facing the motorist today is the glaring headlight and spotlight," according to A. E. Shearer of the Oregon State Motor association. "Visitors from all coast states comment upon the dangerous condition attending night driving in Oregon."

"The last two sessions of the legislature have attempted to correct this evil and the second effort became a law only a few days ago."

"There was a decided difference of opinion as to the advisability and efficiency of the law as passed by the 1925 session and as a consequence it was not enforced" and motorists disregarded it. The law as passed by the last legislature is one on which all authorities agreed and it is highly desirable that this law be enforced by all law enforcement agencies.

"Night driving in Oregon has been given a bad name in neighboring states but if the present law is enforced this condition should rapidly be remedied."
