Testing Times

ON a levee at a bend in the Mississippi a thousand men were building with sand-bags a second-line defense against rising waters which threatened hundreds of miles of fertile cropland.

The telephone had been put in service but a few minutes before, after a construction crew had worked from sunrise to sunset, often waist-deep in swamp water, to string fifteen miles of line to this isolated outpost.

Such is telephone service in an emergency—service in which telephone men and women do very much the same things they do every day of their lives, but do them under conditions that give vivid emphasis to the import of their efficiency, devotion, and fidelity to public interests.

In such crises, when even the most commonplace of calls may become a matter of life or death, the public realizes its day-by-day dependence upon the telephone and upon the men and women who make of it an instrumentality of human service.

You may well ask what was the amazing proof submitted to Philip which led him to believe that the Almighty forbade such an apparently rational project as a mere canal. The answer may be surprising. The command of God was found in that well-known Biblical verse, which Philip was told applied to continents as well as man: "What God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

No Question Animals Enjoy Playing Games That animals play games seems borne out by most people's observations. It is a common thing, for instance, to see a cat and dog, brought up together, playing hide and seek.

But It Stayed in Family A story is current describing the only sale of real estate John Jacob Astor is thought to have made. He had just watched the completion of his Astor house, about 1830. Next day, he brought his eldest son William down to see it.

Training Teachers The first genuine effort for the professional training of teachers undertaken in the world was undoubtedly by Jean Baptiste de la Salle at Helms in 1681. At the beginning of the Nineteenth century the development of institutions to train teachers took on a new life and the Prussian system of normal schools was firmly established.

Blindness No Handicap In spite of total blindness caused by a gun accident, Henry Fawcett rose to high position in British public life. He was born in Salisbury in 1833. At the age of thirty-two he entered the house of commons, where his ability and devotion to worthy causes soon made him a prominent and influential member.

Too Much Politeness Men are very generally spoiled by being so civil and well disposed. You can have no profitable conversation with them they are so conciliatory: determined to agree with you. They exhibit such long suffering and kindness in a short interview. I would meet with some provoking strangeness; so that we may be guest and host and refresh one another. It is possible for a man to wholly disappear and be merged in his manners.—Thoreau.

Thackeray's Satire "Yellow Plush Papers" were written in 1837 by William Makepeace Thackeray, the well-known English novelist and contemporary of Charles Dickens. The papers form a playful satire of funkeyism, whether it be the funkeyism of the wealthy or that of the servants.

Difficulty of Middle Ages Perhaps the hardest time for a middle-aged man to think he feels just as young as he used to be is just after he has come up a couple of flights of stairs at a fairly brisk pace.—Ohio State Journal.

61 Star Cars bought by the New York Police Department

Solely on the strength of superior performance in open competition, the Star Car earned its rating in the world-famous organization of guardians of the law.

Up and down Broadway, Fifth Avenue, Riverside Drive—thirty, forty and fifty miles an hour—weaving in and out of traffic, swinging around corners, climbing hills—for four hours the official tester tried to shatter the claims made for Star Cars. It was one of the most gruelling tests in the history of the automobile, but the Star Car won the approval of the discriminating New York city officials.
