Matter of History Confirmed by Coin

Coins do more than throw corroboration on historical events. In some cases they actually supply data missing in the records which would otherwise remain in the limbo of forgotten things.

There is an old tradition of the Christian church, for instance, that the Apostle Thomas, familiarly known as Doubting Thomas, went to India as a missionary. The Apocrypha contains a book known as the "Acts of St. Thomas," in which is revealed how the disciple converted one Gondaphar, king of India, to Christianity.

As far as history can tell us, no such king ever lived. But in 1838 coins were found in northwestern India bearing the name Gondaphar. Thus the tradition was corroborated and the apocryphal book found to contain the truth.

Shortly afterward other coins of the same period were discovered, lacking the name, but bearing a new inscription. This time it was "Great Savior, King of Kings." No numismatist will go so far as to declare that this inscription refers to the king's conversion, but it may very likely be so.—Crawford Wyman in the Saturday Evening Post.

Pumice Deposits Due to Volcanic Activity

Nebraska possesses extraordinary deposits of pumice. Virtually the whole state is overlaid by natural deposits of this substance, in all stages of consolidation, from fairly solid rock to the finest dust.

Pumice is a volcanic product, and its presence in such large quantities in Nebraska and some adjoining states is taken to be evidence of former volcanic activity in that region. It is produced by the rapid expansion of gases in lava, due to sudden release of pressure, which either forms a very light, porous rock or may completely shatter the lava into dust, in which state it may be transported great distances by wind and deposited in drifts.

In the western portion of Nebraska there are impure masses of it, probably deposited in this way, 100 feet or more in depth. Nearly all the pumice or the volcanic ash in the United States is made into polishing powder or incorporated in abrasive soap. Other uses are the manufacture of semi-fused flint brick or mineral wool or cement and of a cheap kind of glass.

Literary Anecdote

There was nothing that James Whitcomb Riley liked better than a cup of weak tea. Once when he and Edgar Wilson (Bill) Nye were eating chocolate soldiers after an arduous siege of lecturing, the talk turned to fame.

"The keystone of every famous author's glory is one character," said Nye. "Shakespeare achieved fame through inventing the character of Falstaff. Dickens is deservedly well known for his Samuel Weller. Thackeray created Becky Sharp. Now then, Mr. Riley, from what character of your invention did you obtain your reputation?" "I got it Orphan Annie," answered Riley, who had not had more than three cups of diluted tea since dinner time.—Akron Beacon-Journal.

Important in Commerce

"Ramie" is the name of a fiber-producing plant and of the fiber produced thereby. The fiber is one of the strongest and finest known. The plant is widely grown in China, more or less in India and has been grown in California on a small scale. From China and India it is exported to various countries of Europe and to the United States. The fiber is employed in the manufacture of nets, cordage, gas mantles, underwear, canvas, dress goods, etc., and for embroideries. Some of the woven fabrics composed of it closely resemble those made of flax linen in various characteristics, including appearance.

Elephants That Burn

Mixed metaphors are not by any means uncommon. Sometimes they are merely inept; occasionally they are ludicrous. In England the other day the Salford city council emitted a gem.

The question under municipal debate was whether Salford wanted to have an exhibition hall. There seems to have been a considerable difference of opinion. Said one speaker:

"I do not want the council to get their fingers burnt with a white elephant!"

Presidents for a Day

In March, 1849, the United States had three successive Presidents on as many successive days. James K. Polk ended his term March 3. President-elect Zachary Taylor refused to be inaugurated on Sunday, and he did not take office until March 5. As neither administration was in office, David Rice Atchison of Kentucky, president pro tem. of the senate, served in the interim.

Appropriated Motto

"Ich dien" is a German phrase, meaning literally "I serve." It was originally the motto of John, the blind king of Bohemia, who served in the army of the king of France and was slain in the battle of Crecy, 1346. The victorious English army was led by Edward the Black Prince, who appropriated the motto, which since that time has been the motto of the prince of Wales.

Record Meteor

The largest meteor ever found in the United States is 10 feet long, 6 1/2 feet high and 4 feet 3 inches thick. It weighs 31,107 pounds. It was found at Willamette, Ore., in 1902, and is now in the American Museum of Natural History, New York.

Biddies Not Fooled By Electric Lights

CORVALLIS, Ore., July 21.—(U. P.)—This stunt of putting electric lights in hen houses to fool the fowls into laying earlier and more often than usual has failed in its purpose.

The hens, so it seems, were deceived temporarily and then cackled loudly their belief that someone was playing a trick on them, and responded by making such underhanded methods unprofitable.

F. E. Fox, member of the poultry husbandry staff of the Oregon agriculture college, has conducted an extensive investigation and, after taking the feelings of Mrs. Hen into consideration, has discovered that fooling the poor chicken isn't such good business.

On the basis of a year's production, Fox learned, lighted hen houses do not pay. The lights stimulated production during winter months, he said, but this increase was more than offset by a decline during the remainder of the year.

The hen house lighting trick was to turn electric lights on before sun-up. The hens were supposed to think it was day time and get up and go about the business of laying eggs.

Lancaster got his shotgun and used that to dispatch the rat-ther, one of the first to be killed here this season.
