Oregon Is Best State In Which to Be Born

Makes Record for Number of Babies Saved in First Year of Life.

That Oregon still holds the distinction of being the safest state in which to be born is proved by the 1926 summary report of the United States public health service. This report shows that Oregon saves 948 babies out of each 1000 living births. The nearest competitor is Washington, where 944 out of each 1000 are saved. Minnesota comes third with 933. The poorest showing is made by Arizona, where only 880 babies of each 1000 are saved through the first year of life.

Portland has the highest ratio of baby saving of all cities over 100,000. This city saves 961 babies of each 1000 born alive. This is an improvement of 7 lives the 1000 over the year 1925. Eleven small cities of the United States had rates more favorable than Portland's rate. The highest rate was shown by Benton Harbor, Mich., where 973 out of each 1000 babies survived the first year. Of the other ten small cities with favorable rates, four were in California, one in Washington and one in Oregon. The last mentioned is Salem, where the Marion county child health demonstration is in progress.

Dog Licenses Being Paid. Warning letters sent out by Sheriff Frank E. Taylor to Lane county dog owners that they must obtain county licenses for their canines at once or face the penalty of being cited to appear in court are having quite an effect. A large number of dog owners are appearing at the office of the county clerk and purchasing the little brass tags. It is expected that in the near future action will be taken against tardy dog owners.
