Modern Education

Little Will was vigorously waving his arm. He was in kindergarten and that was the way he had been told to attract the teacher's attention. Teacher saw him and gently asked, as kindergarten teachers do:

"What is it, Willie?"
"I want to go home."
"But you can't go home until school lets out."

"But I want to talk to my mother."
"Then I shall call her on the phone if it is necessary."

So the teacher called Willie's mother. Willie's mother was worried. What could the child want? Says Willie: "Mother!"

Over the phone—"What is it Willie? What is the matter?"
"I want to talk to you."
"What do you want to talk to me about?"

"You better come and get me and Mary."

"Why, Willie?"
—"If you don't want us to grow up to be damn' head stringers."—Columbia Jester.

Little Girl: Yes, sir, my name is Lola and these are my sisters, Lila and Lela.

Old Gentleman: Ah, I see you have alliterate parents.—Colgate Banters.

When Wifey Takes the Wheel. Doctor (to patient who claims to be a nervous wreck):—"What are your symptoms?"

Patient—"I jump when I hear a telephone, the door-bell sends me into hysterics. Any stranger coming to the house frightens me out of my life, and I'm afraid to pick up a newspaper. Do you know what's wrong with me?"

Doctor—"Yes. My wife drives a car, too!"—Passing Show.

Scales Wouldn't Lie

A 51-pound muskellunge was landed at Conneaut Lake on Tuesday by John L. ("Boss") Wilson, of Butler. The fish is said to have been the largest ever taken from the lake and weighed 30 pounds.—Kittanning (Pennsylvania) paper.

The large-petaled shoulder flower continues to rule supreme for evening time. Rarely do we see a smart evening gown without shoulder decoration and the larger the flower the smarter. Colored chiffon flowers with large petals and flowers made of silver or gold metallic chiffon are equally popular. Some of those novel corsages are so huge that they cover the entire shoulder with petals falling over the upper arm. The white flower is a bit newer than colored ones.

Paste jewels set in oxidized silver in imitation of antique silver settings are among the smart jewels for evening wear. Lovely pendant earrings with medallions of imitation diamonds from which extend numerous strands of tiny pearls are most effective. Bracelets and necklaces likewise are of paste.

Putting Wings on a Man

"And at her request you gave up drinking?"

"Yes."

"And you stopped for the same reason?"

"I did."

"And it was for her that you gave up dancing, card parties and billiards?"

"Absolutely."

"Then why didn't you marry her?"

"Well, after all this reforming I realized I could do better."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

No Faith in Publicity Stuff. An old mining prospector was being solaced on his sick-bed by a clergyman, who told him of the Heavenly Jerusalem, "the streets of which are paved with gold."

"Excuse me, parson," interrupted the dying man, "are you quoting from the prospectus or from the assay report?"—Public Opinion (London.)

Bond of Brotherhood Between Poetic Souls

A certain young woman, a stenographer for a New York firm, is best known in an admiring suburban circle as a "poetess." She jots her inspirations down in shorthand notes, transcribes them on her typewriter and submits the effusions to the local newspaper, which sometimes finds place for them.

One morning as she was commuting from New Jersey there was a heavy fog on the North river and the ferryboat was proceeding on its way gropingly, with frequent stops and much whistling. At one time, out of the gloom, a great hoarse whistle, suggesting an ocean liner, sounded near. There was a stir of uneasiness among the crowded passengers, and the poet's male companion looked up from his newspaper with a nervous frown.

"Are you afraid?" he asked of the poetess.

"Afraid!"—the word came with withering scorn. "Afraid! Why, you know shelly died by drowning!"—Harper's Magazine.

Stained Glass Makes Appeal to Converts

In the center of a Christian settlement in the jungle of Madak, Hyderabad, India, stands a Christian church of the proportions of a cathedral. This is the central place of worship for the great community of Indian Christians numbering over 50,000, who have gathered around Rev. C. W. Fossett, a Wesleyan missionary, as a result of his 30 years' work in this native state. The church was opened a year ago, but there seemed something lacking in its beautiful interior, despite the marbles and many tinted tiles. There was no stained glass in the windows. Six thousand Indian Christians have given the money for a window, designed by Frank O. Salisbury, a well-known British artist. The subject is the Ascension, and Mr. Salisbury says of the windows: "The desire of the donors was that their church should be as beautiful as any Mohammedan mosque or Hindu temple, and I trust that my work will help them to realize their ideal of beauty as an aid to worship."

Queen Victoria Story

Some amusing stories concerning Queen Victoria are told by Sir Felix Semon in his autobiography. The queen had a great sense of dignity, but she also possessed a keen sense of humor. For instance, when Sir James Reid, her majesty's physician-in-ordinary, became engaged to one of her maids of honor, the Hon. Miss Baring, the queen was exceedingly angry, and, sending for him, lectured him severely. He ought to have known, she told him, that nobody was permitted to propose to a maid of honor without obtaining the queen's permission. Sir James listened, then humbly answered that her majesty was quite right; he certainly would not do it again! This so strongly appealed to the queen's sense of humor that she laughed heartily, and without further ado extended her pardon.

Slightly Private

He was a newcomer to the bank and consequently found his duties rather hard to remember; but all this was forgotten when he received his first pay envelope.

In a businesslike manner he quickly checked the contents before signing the receipt. Then his eye caught the words underlined in black:

"Your salary is your personal business and a confidential matter. It should not be disclosed to anyone."

The clerk grinned as he picked up a pen and signed his name. Below he added briefly:

"I won't mention it to anyone. I am as much ashamed of it as you are."

India's Holi Festival

At the time of the vernal equinox, on the night of the full moon, the popular Holi festival is celebrated by the Hindus of India. The ceremonies, lasting for three days, are derived from the ancient spring festival. This festival, originally a solemn religious rite, has degenerated and is now known as the Saturnalia of India. Bonfires are lit around the temples and sacrifices are made to the gods. Red powder called kunkuma is thrown about, as Occidents throw confetti, and the clothing of the people becomes covered with it.

Brain Works Rapidly

Assuming you began to think consciously at the age of five, then at thirty, if you have done an average amount of thinking, your "impressions" would number about 1,920,000,000. Those whose work is entirely mental would double those figures.

A woman's brain is about five ounces lighter than a man's, but it is of superior quality—of a higher specific gravity. It lasts longer, too. On an average a woman of sixty has a 20 per cent better brain than a man of the same age.

The Kiss in History

Kisses between men were common in England until the Seventeenth century. Medieval knights used to kiss each other before they began jousting, as modern heavyweights shake hands. Pages in France used to kiss articles they were given to deliver, both when they received them from the hands of senders and just before they delivered them to recipients, as a sign of honor.

Theory vs. Practice

A "sham battle" would be a great relief to the mind if there were any assurance that a real battle would follow the pattern it lays down with any degree of respect.—Washington Star.
