WHICH SHALL IT BE?

Lane county can be a recreational county, or it can be an industrial county, or it can have both industries and recreational features, but in the latter case recreational features would have to be subordinated to industry. This was brought out in a round table discussion at a meeting of Lane county publishers held here Saturday evening.

A majority of the people of the county have a feeling that they would like to retain pretty fishing streams and beautiful camping spots. A majority would like to preserve these where they could be reached by an hour's drive from any city of the county. The automobile has made this possible, for thousands visit the near-by recreational spots every weekend and hundreds visit those that require a drive of several hours.

Mr. Jenkins' suggestion that Lane county must decide, and that at no late date, whether or not industrial development shall be subordinated to recreational development, probably was motivated by the storm of protest that was aroused by the recent proposal to construct a power dam on the McKenzie, the most notable recreational stream of the county. The pretty fishing streams that go tumbling on their way to the Willamette are daily wasting their energies beating their waters into foam on the rocks that emborder them or impede their progress. In their restless wanderings they carry with them hundreds of millions of undeveloped horsepower. As they rush onward, they carry only their own waters, when with no added exertion they could carry the waste water of great industrial plants. Shall they be permitted thus to waste their energies? That is the question upon which we are going to be called to decide, and that shortly.

In the east, where industrial development has not been hindered, such scenic treasures as the Susquehanna and the Hudson have become almost refuse and sewage canals, with no ill effects except to destroy them as recreational and scenic streams. Do we want the Willamette to carry the refuse of great industrial plants, or do we want it preserved for its beauty? Can we afford to preserve it for its beauty? Landscapes and frothing riffles where the sportive trout plays hide and seek pay no taxes and provide no payrolls. A majority of the people are not willing to provide the money for office buildings, normal schools and hospitals which the state needs. Are we willing to sacrifice a far greater amount than our whole state government costs us in order to satisfy our love of the great outdoors, our love of scenic beauties, our sentimental feelings towards sylvan solitudes, gamboling trout streams and shady camping spots far from the madding crowd? That is a question to which we soon must formulate an answer, and a decisive one.

If there is anything in the old saying about faith that moves mountains, the woman who believes everything her husband tells her has faith enough to make this old world reverse its motion. "Register Now for Guard Pruce Exhibit," said a recent headline in the Eugene evening paper. This is the first time that the morning paper has joined with it in a private enterprise. The man intoxicated with nectar from a woman's lips may feel just as drowsy as the man who was on a regular souze the night before. Woman may be born the equal of man but it doesn't take her long to overcome it.

AN ADMISSON. (Forest Grove News-Times.) The pleasantly discursive columns of The Cottage Grove Sentinel advise us of our own misinformation regarding the status, past and present, of the new president of the Oregon State Editorial Association. We confess the error and grant that the Sentinel that one can be a county judge or a highway commissioner or most anything else and still be a mighty good newspaper man—so long as he has the price of a kit of ink. Simply because one quits fishing to become a hunter doesn't seem to make him any less a fisherman, at least for purposes of livelihood. We admit that his newspaper ownership as a sideline to county judging and highway commissioning doesn't make the new president any the less an estimable gentleman and a fine fellow. The Sentinel has performed a genuine service in showing us one way by which it is possible for a man to have his cake and eat it too. Or isn't that just what we are supposed to admit?

CORRECTION PLATINUM STORY. Through an error in the editorial department of The Sentinel, the story in Thursday's issue concerning the discovery of ore on the old Oakland trail running high in platinum content was made to say that an assay had been made by the mining department of O. A. C. The story, as written by the Culp Creek correspondent, said that an analysis by the mining department showed iron, tin, gold and platinum as component parts of the ore. The assay showing a return of $98 to $364 in platinum was by a reliable assayer in no way connected with the college. The Culp Creek correspondent is painstakingly accurate in his stories and The Sentinel gladly makes this correction to place the blame where it belongs.

Poor Work. The young wife sat plying her needle. "It's too bad," she said to her husband, "the careless way the tailor sewed this button on. This is the fifth time I've had to put it on for you."

"Got any shad roes?" asked the young man of the grocer's daughter, who was waiting on trade. "My name ain't Rose—it's Gladys," retorted the damsel; "and please remember I'm Miss Smith to you."
