

For several years a negro had served faithfully as the caretaker of one of the dormitories at University of North Carolina. One day he came into the president's office and presented his resignation. Dr. Battle expressed some regret, saying that he disliked to lose him. "Yess, sah," replied the negro, "but, you see, it's dis way, Mr. President. You know, I use a preacher, and de bishop at de las' conference has done sent me down to Tarboro, N. C., 'cause he says dat charge needs a university man!"

Brother of Tecumseh Neglected by History

Elkswatana, younger brother of Tecumseh, was largely responsible for the part that great Indian warrior and statesman played in organizing a federation of the red men to oppose the encroachments of the whites. In 1805 Elkswatana proclaimed himself a religious leader and began to arouse the tribes of Indiana, Ohio and Illinois, to the great disturbance of the settlers. His doctrines were not primarily revolutionary, but temperance and total abstinence were tenets, together with reverence for old age and sympathy for the infirm. He also urged his people to resist intermarriage and to preserve their own customs. This being in line with what all Indians had held as ideal previous to Caucasian invasion, his preaching caused much excitement among the tribes and fear among the whites. It was the response of the Indians to his brother's pleading that started Tecumseh on his mission in the cause of federation which took him to the Cherokee and the other more civilized tribes of the South, in the course of which he covered many thousand miles.

Colonial Home Built to Defy Father Time

Shortly before the French revolution many noblemen left France and came to Louisiana, where they established fine homes, becoming substantial, loyal citizens of the South. Among these was Marquis Tennant, who arrived about 1788 on his estate in Pointe Coupee, one of the earliest settlements on the Mississippi river. Here he built a stately French colonial mansion and presented it to his bride on their wedding day. It was constructed throughout of red cypress, cut from the swamps on the place. The rafters and heavy timbers were hewn to shape and put together with wooden pegs. The interior was finished with hand-carved moldings and antique panel work, which still preserve the characteristic grandeur of the Eighteenth century. The excellent condition of this historic manor house today is a tribute to the building wisdom of its founder in selecting native cypress for all parts.

Black Phosphorus

Black phosphorus, hitherto supposed to be pure phosphorus turned black as a result of sudden cooling, is produced by the contact of phosphorus with mercury on which it can react at the moment when it passes from the liquid to the solid state. Molten phosphorus dissolves mercury, giving a colorless solution. When cooled the saturated solution remains colorless in all low temperatures, but if the phosphorus solidifies the solidification is very weak and the mercury leaves the solidified phosphorus and colors it black. If black phosphorus is melted, the mercury is easily redissolved in the surrounding phosphorus and the whole body becomes colorless. This is the correct explanation of the phenomenon.

The Happiest People

I have learned that the happiest people in the world are those who are happily mated and have large families. Although they do not say, as a rule, that they are happy, I often see the envy in other people's eyes. They work hard, apparently not knowing how disagreeable are the tasks thrust upon them, and without caring how much their labors make them tired. When the evening comes they carry home the profits of their toil and lay them on the laps of the women who love them. Perhaps, somewhere in the next room, a baby is crying. I might find it disturbing. They think it the most beautiful music in the world.—Hannen Swaffer, British Dramatic Critic, in London Express.

Undoubtedly Offended

There's one woman in Kansas City who knows human nature. She was riding on a street car with a friend. They were discussing their mutual acquaintances, and in such a tone of voice that the passengers on the car were beginning to feel that they, too, knew them. Said the one with the red hat and the green coat: "I'd like to know what Martha's sore about?" "How d'you know she's sore?" asked the one who wore the plaid stockings. "Well, if she ain't sore, why'd she come over last night and bring back every last thing she's borrowed in the last six months?"—Kansas City Star.

Taste and Invention

For generations past architecture has been so overlaid with extraneous matter that many authorities actually preach that in this branch of art it is in bad taste to invent. Correct architecture, they say, consists of merely in reassembling borrowed forms. All of which is palpably absurd. If the Greeks had thought so there never would have been any Greek art. On the contrary, architecture, now as ever, consists in solving problems of utility as economically and appropriately as may be.—New York Sun.

He Likes Insects

The fire-toad, Bombinator igneus, is always a most amusing and charming pet, says Nature Magazine. The natural foods are the many kinds of small insects that live on the water-plants growing at the water's surface.

Trouble Ahead

Asked whether she would "love, honor and obey," a rebellious Scranton bride replied: "I will not." A new version of the nuptial not.—Farm and Fireside.

An old woman brought it out to him, and after drinking he had quite a talk with her, telling her great stories about some of the wonders he had seen in the outside world. Finally, when he stopped to take breath, the old woman took her pipe out of her mouth and said: "Stranger, if I knowed as much as you do I'd go some'ere and start a little grocery."
